THOMAS JONATHAN BURRILL

By FRANK W. SCOTT

THOMAS JONATHAN BURRILL, Nestor of the faculty of the University of Illinois, the man who has been here continuously for a longer time than any other, was born April 25, 1839, at Pittsfield, Massachusetts. He came to Illinois when nine years of age; when Illinois was almost a trackless prairie, and the trip from Chicago to any part of the state had to be made by horses and oxen.

Among the primitive surroundings of that time he secured his early education, attending school in a log schoolhouse four months each winter, until ready for the Rockford High school, from which he was graduated. After teaching in the country schools young Mr. Burrill entered the Illinois State Normal school at Normal, and was graduated in 1865. It was during this period that he became devoted to the study of science. For three years he was superintendent of the Urbana public schools, continuing, in the meantime, the study of science. His zeal as a student and his success as a teacher attracted the attention of the authorities of the newly established "Illinois Industrial University."

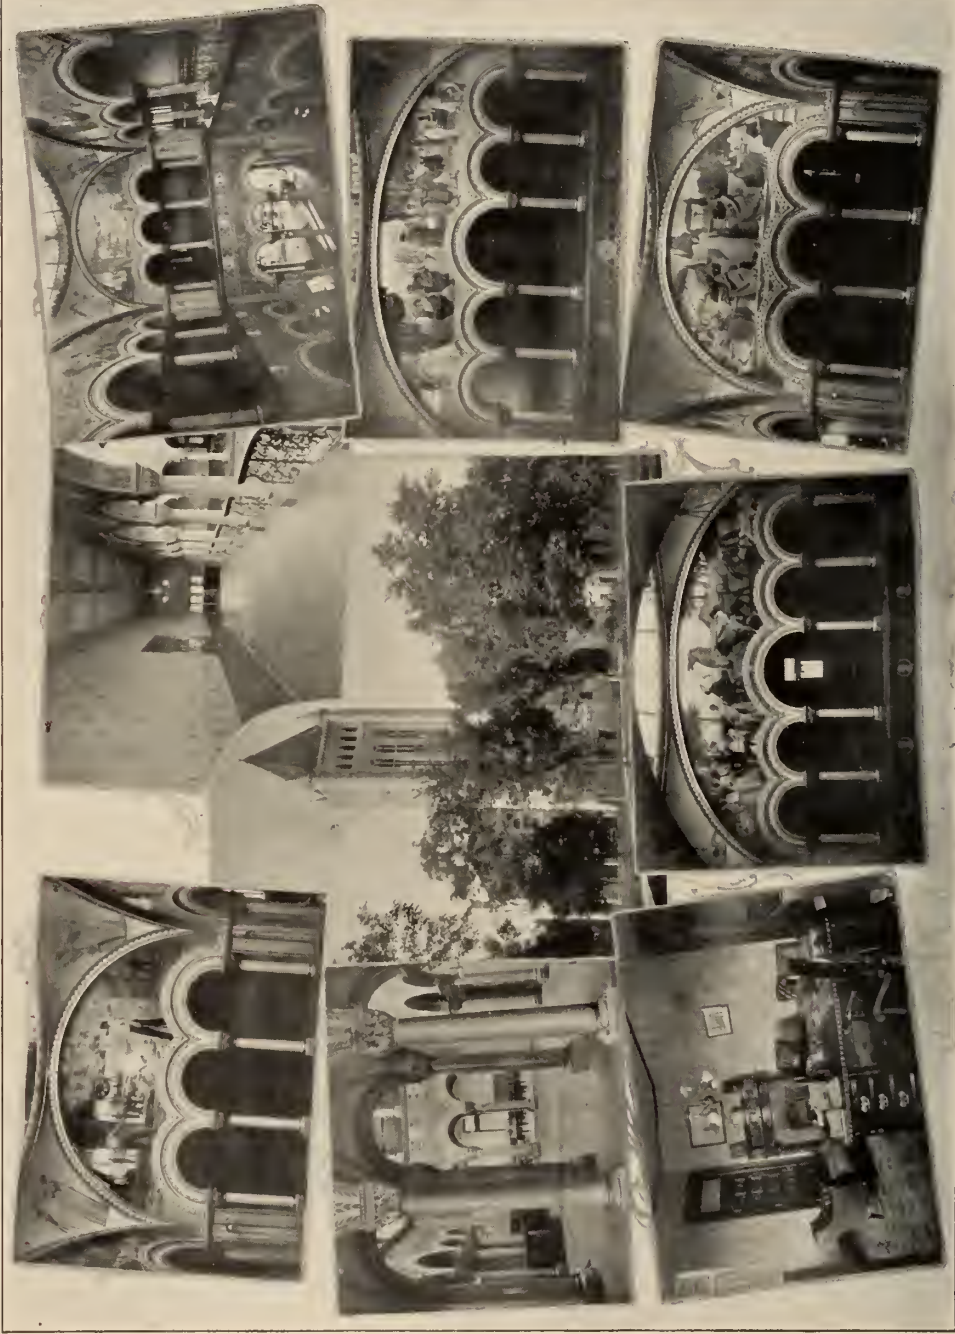

In 1868 Dr. Burrill became Assistant Professor of Natural History; he was appointed Professor of Botany and Horticulture two years later. Since that time Dr. Burrill has been closely identified with the University in many ways. He has been Professor of Botany continuously since 1870: he was Dean of the College of Science from 1878 until 1884; he has been Vice-president of the University since 1878 and was Dean of the Graduate School from the time of its organization until 1905.

Dr. Burrill brought about many changes in scientific methods. When he began his work here only one year was given up to botany, zoology, and geology, one term to each. He extended the course to one year for each subject. He inaugurated the laboratory method in the schools of the state, planned the first modern laboratory in this section of the country, and introduced the use of the microscope in plant investigation.

Not the least of Dr. Burrill's services have been those in connection with the Agricultural Experiment Station, in which his activity in investigating and combating the injurious foes to economic plant life, especially to fruits, in this state has made him perhaps more generally known throughout the commonwealth than any other man of science. Since 1888 he has been Horticulturist, Botanist, and a member of the Board of Directors of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

Academic honors have been accorded Dr. Burrill by several universities. In 1876 Northwestern University conferred on him the degree of Master of Arts; in 1893 that of Doctor of Laws. Chicago University conferred the degree of Doctor of Philosophy (on thesis) in 1881. He has been identified with several learned societies, being a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Illinois State Natural History Society, the Scientific Association of Sioux City, the Royal Microscopic Society, and of the American Microscopical Society, of which last he has been secretary and president. Dr. Burrill has been a prolific writer on botanical and horticultural subjects, his published papers numbering more than two hundred.

Among the former students of the University no member of the faculty is so well known or so kindly remembered. For nearly forty years he has been the teacher, friend and helper of the succession of hundreds of students who have come and gone, and among them all, from the early comers in the days of small beginnings, to those who are now laboring under his kindly guidance, no one is held in deeper regard than Thomas Jonathan Burrill.

"She hath an endless flow of conversation."—HELEN ATKINSON

A SENIOR REVERIE

The Senior sat as if carved from stone.
Before the fire in his room alone.
His arms before him on the table crossed
Supported a head in fancy lost.
A chill crept through the embers to him ;
The little clock ticked a doleful din.
A thin blue smoke in a mist arose
A protesting curtain for his repose.
Our friend the Senior had gone away
While o'er his being these thoughts held sway.

TO the wanderer without the castle of '06 the world seems cold and harsh. A mist lies over the Boneyard, while Old University tower fades away like a spectre. Cold and massive loom the walks of the castle. Within is song and laughter, and the heart overflows.

As martial music stirs the champing charger so the pulse of '06 quickens by leaps and bounds under the goad of thoughts which come and go. Contemplation, ever the friend; and retrospection, ever the joy, of '06, vie one with the other for the place of honor in the Senior's breast. Thoughts of freshmen days, sophomore hopes, juniors ambitions, flash, then die out upon the call of the Senior June. Naught Six has run her race. The laurels even now rest upon her brow. The class, when she burns her bridges and retires into history, will have closed an epoch of changes at Illinois.

Arm in arm, the University and her favorite offspring, Naught Six, have grown. Her fate ever to be connected with thoughts of strength and power, is a pleasant one. Down the ages will roll the slogan, Naught Six—her men, her women.

Rising from an infancy steeped in the traditions of ancient prophecy '06 has grown from ungainly childhood to the perfect symmetry of maturity which marks her advance to receive the honors, the fruits of abounding loyalty, strength and unity of purpose, which are justly hers. A hot flood of great joy and a scowl to hide the pleasure felt, answer the tremor of patriotism which consumes, like fire, the spirit of Naught Six.

Suddenly as the murmur of the watchers without swells with the fever of expectancy, the gates of the castle are opened wide. A blinding light, a roar, and a mighty ball of flame shoots straight toward the heavens, and, reaching a height before unknown breaks into a myriad of smaller balls of fire, which, separating, are wafted to the four points of the compass. Thus, as these tiny stars, will the influence of the sons of Naught Six of Illinois descend into every land.

HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF 1908

With most sincere apologies to Edgar Allen Poe

It was many and many a month ago,
To a town of the middle west,
That as freshmen we came, whom now you know,
We are called the best of the best ;
And as freshmen we came with no other thought
Than to conquer all in our quest.

We were bold and the school was old,
In this town of the middle west,
And we soon let them know that a class that had "go"
Had come and would not be oppressed ;
A class that could stand the sophomore band
When challenged and put to the test.

And this was the reason that, late last fall,
In this town of the middle west,
The class just in from the verdant plains
Planned, with unusual zest
A pole, whose colors one scarce could see,
In the great anxiety lest
Our mighty band with its untold strength
The ribbons from them might wrest.

These freshmen were taught but a short time before,
In a night thus devoid of rest,
That one of the customs, as all men know
In this town of the middle west,
Is that "Procs" are posted ; that ours remain
Longest and surest, the rest are suppressed.

From the scenes that are warlike the class now convenes
For those of the gayest of fest,
For those that are merry with jest ;
And shows that if it is but given the means
To be courteous to stranger and guest,
No work does it shirk, and no care does it spare,
To follow each social behest.

And now ere we close, let us end all our woes
By a glance at the valiant breast,
Which in battle athletic is so energetic
As to win in each glorious test ;
In baseball and track our members we back,
Then, too, in its studies our class shows no lack ;
For we are "the best of the best",
In this school of the middle west.

"Some people are born beautiful; others achieve beauty, but I simply can't help it."— ELSIE BEAN.

MY DEAR MARIE:—

YOU remember I told you I should write you about the things which impressed me most at Illinois. I have decided that the Freshman class is the thing which has interested me most. This class seems to be an unusually remarkable one. They have displayed none of the meekness usually shown by Freshmen. From the very first they showed their superiority in the calm, indifferent way they accompanied their sage brother sophomores to the "boneyard". They quite agreed a "ducking" would make them very much better students, and better able to enjoy college life. It did not take them very long to show their appreciation, because quite their proclamation told the sophomores just what they thought of them.

The Sophomores are a practical bunch, and were not satisfied until the Freshmen showed them exactly what they could do in the color rush. This was no meek fight soon on the part of the Freshmen. It was a valiant fight, nobly won.

The Freshmen have been treated with a great deal of respect since that time.

Then the sophomore-freshman debate was another time when the Freshman class showed their capabilities. The Sophomores have probably forgotten the result of this debate.

The Freshman class was remarkable in almost every way. This was the first year the Freshmen class has ever had a foot-ball team. This team did some excellent work.

The freshmen class-meetings, I must admit, is where true Freshman characteristics showed themselves. They were truly riotous meetings, such that a senior or junior would look upon with pity mingled with contempt.

The girls of this class have done their best to help make it one of the greatest in the annals of Illinois. They attend the class-meetings, which shows a truly brave spirit, and they have been quite successful in basket ball games.

The Freshmen are justly proud of their record, and do not mean to be vain or impertinent when they tell of their accomplishments, but simply to prove that they seem destined to be, even when Freshmen, one of the most promising classes at Illinois.

Yours as ever,

A FRESHMAN.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS

PROFESSOR WILLIAM T. ECKLEY

WILLIAM T. ECKLEY, M.D., Professor of Anatomy of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, University of Illinois, was born in Sigourney, Iowa, September 4, 1855. His early life was spent toiling on his father's farm. Before many years had elapsed, however, he realized the necessity of obtaining an education, which he rightly considered essential for his future success and happiness; consequently he outlined his studies and work so that he might realize his ambition, working during the daytime in the harvest fields and applying himself to his books at night. In this way he acquired such knowledge as was within his means and later, he decided to better himself by attending the public schools in the vicinity of his home. One by one his courses were completed and at the age of twenty he became an academic graduate. His next undertaking was as a teacher of English, Latin, and German in the school from which he had graduated, and in this capacity he served four years.

In the fall of 1879 Dr. Eckley gave up his position as teacher and entered Beloit College with the intention of studying theology. This idea was, however, soon abandoned and a few weeks later he matriculated in the Medical Department of the University of Iowa. It was at this institution that the study of anatomy so strongly appealed to him. At last, after many years he had found his vocation and each day he became more and more eager to master the details of the human mechanism. In 1884 he received his degree of Doctor of Medicine. Financial embarrassment at this time delayed the progress of his study and in order to obtain the means necessary to relieve the situation he entered the field of general practice. During this experience, however, he did not neglect his chosen work, and many hours were spent in close application to Gray and other classical text books of this kind. Several years were spent in this, but it was terminated in 1893. At last the realization of his fondest hope was before him; he was appointed Professor of Anatomy in one of the great and leading Universities of the middle West; i. e. Northwestern University. At this institution he remained up to the time that he was appointed to fill the chair of Anatomy in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which position he still holds.

During his many years of active service in this capacity, he has been brought in contact with hundreds of medical and dental students, and to instruct them has been his one ambition. This has been accomplished by actual and personal demonstration in the large anatomical laboratories of the institution. He is the author of many elaborate text books on practical and applied anatomy, which are a great credit to him and a very valuable guide to the students in their anatomical work. His lectures and demonstrations have won for him a place among the best authorities on anatomy in America and Europe. Dr. Eckley is a member of the American Medical Association, The Chicago Medical Society, The Medical Legal Society, The Chicago Pathological Society and the Society of American Anatomists.

Perhaps one of the greatest triumphs of his long career was attained at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in 1904, when his extensive Anatomical Exhibit was awarded the emblem of superiority over all the able competitors that were represented in this department. The minutest detail of preparation of the many beautiful sections exhibited was done under his personal direction and supervision. It is just such men as Dr. Eckley, who as models to the student body, help to form and uphold the dignified reputation of the University which bears the name of the State of Illinois.

"To be great is to be misunderstood."—SHERPER

WILLIAM EDWARD QUINE, M. D.
DEAN OF THE COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS

JOHN WEATHERSON, C.E., M.D.

JOHN WEATHERSON, C.E., M.D., Professor of Medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons was born in Chicago, June 14, 1873.

His early education was acquired in the city public schools, and at the age of seventeen he had completed the Grammar School Course and also received his diploma from the Chicago English High and Manual Training School. His next ambition was to become a civil engineer, consequently he entered the civil engineering department of Cornell University in the fall of 1891. Four years later he graduated from that institution with the highest honors. Instead of remaining in the field of mechanics he was ambitious still to pursue scientific and professional studies, which he did, and chose medicine and surgery as his profession. In the fall of 1897 he matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and in 1900 he was awarded his degree as Doctor of Medicine.

Shortly after his graduation he received an appointment as an assistant to Dr. William E. Quine, Dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. In this capacity he had experience in one of the most extensive private practices in the City and was thus enabled to further acquaint himself with the finer details of medicine under the able tutorship of Dr. Quine, who has done so much to advance the medical profession.

There is but little doubt that the greatest achievements in the history of the medical and surgical professions have been attained within the past two decades. These two branches of professional work have always borne the reputation of being complicated in every detail of the broad fields they cover. Today however, we can look back on what were seemingly unsolvable conditions and see the effectiveness of scientific treatment. Having had the advantage of a complete and finished education in both the technical and medical courses, such as has been the fortune of Dr. Weatherston, it is easy to comprehend how as a teacher and practitioner he is so well equipped to teach the future aspirants of the medical profession the many minute details of human mechanics and economy.

The practitioner of the older school spent but a comparatively short time in actual college work, depending on the study of his books and his preceptor for the principal details of general practice. Time has however changed all this, the process of educational evolution has made its mark. The course of today is longer, more complete, and the science of teaching is in a great degree responsible for this advancement. The undergraduates of the college of Physicians and Surgeons are now enabled to receive a most elaborate course in the science of medicine which includes the practical application of all the branches of study taught in the previous years. This is due to a large extent to the progressive ideas of Dr. Quine and Dr. Weatherston, in establishing and maintaining the so called "sectional" class work. Through their efforts the student is enabled to receive individual instruction throughout the entire year of senior medicine. Therefore when we can realize the large number of students enrolled in the senior year it is easy to understand the extensiveness of this course and the time and work that is essential for its maintenance, it being entirely independent of the lecture hours in which Dr. Quine and Dr. Weatherston frequently alternate. This course then can be easily included among the most complete given in our state university and we can well be proud of it. Dr. Weatherston is most capable in the responsible position he fills and will continue to be identified among the leading men who represent the medical fraternity in this country.

Class History

THAT history is the record of the works of man's mind might well be said of the junior class but, before I go on to enumerate to the eager reader a list of the splendid achievements of this remarkable class, I feel bound to answer two pertinent questions, viz:—Whence came this body of bright young men and women and why? What impulse arising in divers minds in divers places moved them all to a common point in pursuit of a common end : to spend much money and more valuable time preparing themselves to enter the honorable and learned profession of medicine.

Some grown tired of wielding the schoolmaster's rod sought a field offering greater opportunities for the gratification of their ambitions in the practice of the "healing art". Many no doubt left the prescription counter and mortar and pestle of our brother pharmacist, finding more satisfaction in the administration of remedies to the sick than in the mechanical labor of compounding and dispensing the same. Some no doubt deserted the artisan's work bench or machinist's lathe, deeming it nobler to apply mechanical and scientific skill in correcting the ills and injuries of human flesh than in fashioning wood and steel. Another and perhaps the largest class were sons of the soil who left the urgent toil of the harvest field and the plodding pace of the plow to become disciple of Aesculapius. A few we suspect, judging from their careers in the medical school, had grown tired of doing nothing and came hither in search of a softer snap. How sadly have they been undeceived. Thus have they gathered from the highways and byways of the country ; from the hamlets scattered throughout neighboring states ; from the sunny south, the fertile plains of the middle west and from the land of pines and hemlocks in the north.

It is not my purpose in this narrative to give in detail the early history of this class, or describe their first appearance in the halls and lecture rooms of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. A few events are worthy of notice. Those who have been with us from the first will recall our first class organization. The stalwart bearing and experienced air of one F. J. Wochos so impressed us that we elected him president for the Freshman year. The election of officers for the Sophomore year due to competition of "frats" and "barbs", was an exciting event. The fiery eloquence of Niels Beck so prevailed that the election resulted in a victory for the "barbs", R. H. Tyler being elected president.

In the Sophomore year a number of important events transpired showing the progressive spirit of the class. To the class of '07 belongs the honor of establishing the "color rush" a fact that will never be forgotten by the handful of Sophomores who met a crushing defeat at the hands of the freshmen on that memorable Halloween. We will likewise remember in this connection the immortal speech by Wade apropos of the same event. To the class of '07 belongs also the credit of instituting reforms in the departments of Chemistry and Therapeutics which have been of benefit to our successors.

"Risus Sardonius."—DR. KING

Aside from splendid attainments in scholarship the class has other things to be proud of. The success of the football team during the season of 1904 was in no small part due to the management of Mr. Wagner and to the playing of the three heavy-weight men, Wagner, Bundy and Buckner, all of the class of '07. And now a few words concerning some of our real celebrities. We invite your attention to Curtis, "who rejoices in a well developed faculty for bluffing." Observe John Aimone, alias "Polly," the dispensary fiend, in his celebrated act of "slumping" after roll call to get in more hours in the domain of the "evil one" who reigns in the lower regions. Who has not marveled at the superhuman nerve of Ettetson, the profound erudition and sounding eloquence of Bachman. Edmonson soaks up knowledge while he sleeps and Wade takes notes with a kodak.

Originality is paramount. Wade is trying to find out where the mosquito got the first malarial parasite. Aimone has discovered that the liver is an organ of respiration. Wollinsky gives hot douches three times daily after meals for endometritis and Seibert has found in Orangeine a specific for "grippe."

As this goes to press the junior class is contemplating making changes in the course in Neurology. And so, with Progress for our motto, we will go on through our senior year endeavoring as we go to wipe out the bad impressions created in the minds of the faculty by our immediate predecessors and at the same time to set a high standard of scholastic attainment for those who come after us.

Junior Rules for Correct Living

Mark Twain's advice regarding the proper mode of living necessary to attain to the ripe age of seventy years is enthusiastically endorsed by the juniors of P. and S. They have been living according to these rules for some time, and have waxed fat on the same. We hereby recommend them to the consideration of students of the other departments of the University of Illinois, but we would call attention to this maxim:—Sauer kraut cures a Dutchman but kills an Irishman.

1. As to sleep: Never go to bed until you have to, and, having gone to bed, don't get up until you have to.
2. As to smoking: Smoke always; never smoke more than one cigar at a time; never smoke while asleep; if you wake up occasionally in the night never fail to take advantage of the opportunity to smoke.
3. As to eating: Eat when you feel like it; eat everything you want, but don't frolic with mince pie after midnight. It may be loaded.
4. As to drinking: We prefer dryness for ourselves, but would not recommend it to others.
5. In general: Pursue a regularly irregular mode of living and be sure to live in a way that would kill any one else.

THE Young Men's Christian Association of Physicians and Surgeons has for its motive the affiliation of such men in our schools as believe in being helpful to their fellows, in striving to make the best predominant in every man, and in encouraging a systematic development of body, mind, and spirit.

We have our headquarters on the first floor of the college building where all students, whether members of the Association or not, are welcome at all times to study, write, read magazines or rest during leisure moments.

Active membership consists of those members of the faculty and student body who belong to some evangelical church. Any college man of moral character may become an associate member.

Religious meetings are held once a week on Thursday from 12:30 to 1 o'clock. Bible study classes meet once a week offering opportunities for a systematic study of the Bible. Also the social side of our men is not neglected.

The Student Volunteer Movement is an Association of college men and women who are planning to enter foreign mission work. Prior to January first, 1906, 2953 Volunteers had sailed for foreign mission fields, about one third being women. The volunteer movement has now reached 1000 institutions of higher learning in the United States. Many from our own school are now foreign missionaries and there are at present ten undergraduates preparing to take up the work.

We were represented at the Fifth International Convention, held at Nashville, Tenn., in March, 1906, by seven delegates, four men and three women.

Our employment bureau is maintained to aid those students in securing work who are dependent on their own efforts for the means to carry on their education. Many worthy men have been assisted in securing positions through this department.

We keep a list of the available furnished rooms in the vicinity of the college and thereby assist new comers in finding congenial lodgings. We also keep a student directory so that students may be looked up by friends in case they are not at the college.

Our membership at present is good and we are making fair progress in all branches of work.

THE PLEXUS is the organ of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and is published monthly. It is supported by subscriptions by members of the faculty, alumni and student body. Its aim is to promote the general welfare of the student body and alumni and while its scope is limited the publication has been uniformly successful since its inception, and is now entering on the 13th year of its existence with undimmed prospects of future prosperity. The departments of Dentistry and Pharmacy of the University of Illinois are regularly represented in each issue. The contents for the department of Physicians and Surgeons consists mainly of articles on current topics of medical or surgical interest written by members of the college faculty. In addition to these are interesting news items reported by the editors for the athletic association, the alumni and for the respective classes, making altogether an interesting and instructive publication read and enjoyed alike by undergraduates, faculty and alumni; serving to bring the former in closer relationship and to keep the latter informed as to the progress of their Alma Mater.

THE annual reception in honor of the seniors known as the Junior Promenade, was held at Illinois Hall on December fourteenth, Nineteen hundred and five. Thanks to the diligent efforts of the junior president, the various arrangement committees and the hearty cooperation of the junior class the event was a success socially and financially. So well indeed was the management carried out in every detail that the seniors, the guests of honor, openly admitted that the event surpassed in its execution the reception given by themselves the year before.

The Juniors, Seniors, Alumni and Faculty were well represented, there being nearly six hundred guests present. Dancing was the principal form of amusement of the evening, though ample provision was made for the entertainment of those who did not indulge in the Terpsichorean art. The programme opened with a grand march led by our venerable and jovial Dean, Dr. Quine who enjoyed the occasion as thoroughly and actively as the sprightliest undergraduate present. Following the march, a continuous succession of waltzes and two steps served to drive away the cares of student and instructor alike until the small hours of the morning.

Refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake, coffee and doughnuts were served to the dancers about eleven o'clock in a room adjoining the dance hall, quantum satis, and no complaints were entered with regard to getting a sufficient quantity, which is remarkable considering the proverbial appetite of the medical student.

The decorations provided by a special committee, of which Mr. Keith was chairman, were worthy of more than passing comment. The color scheme was at once striking and artistic. The Christmas colors, suggestive of the happy holiday season so near at hand were effectively employed on the large central fixtures; large red roses held the glittering lights of the chandeliers from the center of which was suspended a large red bell. Festoons of wild asparagus and smilax joined the lamps and huge ropes of ferns were swung from one chandelier to the other. The college colors glowed on the wall brackets where the lights were concealed in yellow chrysanthemums and violets with tiny red bells hanging from each fixture. On either side of the platform on which Mr. Aiker's orchestra sat were banks of stately palms vibrating to the strains of lively music.

THE class of 1906, being the unfortunate ones, entered College as the law went into effect, which attached another year of hard work to the course pursued before our matriculation.

This did not seem to effect us as we were all ambitious and anxious to know all that could possibly be learned about the subject and were glad to think we were to receive an extra amount of knowledge.

All during the Freshman year we were proud to tell our upper class-men that we were to receive more instruction than they— and that when they should read D.D.S. at the close of our signatures, it would mean more than it had, following the names of any of our predecessors.

During our summer vacation, representatives of all the Dental Colleges in the United States met at St. Louis and after many warm discussions, decided that for the good of humanity, it would not do for a year to pass without any dentists being thrown upon them. Thus arguing that our four year course could be arranged in three by adding an extra month's work to each of the three years. So we returned to College having practically three years work to complete in two. It also seemed that our professors realized this and our work was handed out to us in large packages.

This we overlooked in the hope that our last year's work would be much easier. But no such luck was in store for us; before we had finished our Junior work, we learned that we should have to be examined by the "State Board of Dental Examiners" before we should be allowed to practice Dentistry in Illinois.

We all thought that would make but little difference to us as there were plenty of other States in the Union and we could practice in one of them; but when we began our Senior work—(and we are proud to say there are more than twice the number answering to the roll call than answered during our freshman year)—we learned that our faculty had decided differently and that our work would be increased to make sure we could all pass a satisfactory examination, before the "State Board of Dental Examiners", and thus establish a good record for the College. With this in view, both faculty and students have been hard at work.

Having all of these apparently unavoidable things to increase the work in our course, they have been the source of many blessings to us.

Causing an extra amount of work, it has kept us busy all the time and thus prevented us from acquiring any of the evil habits associated with city life.

It enables us to finish our course one year earlier, thus lessening the expense of another year's schooling and causing our fathers to rejoice.

It has taught us some of the hardships we shall be up against when we have finished our course and to improve our opportunities and not look too far into the future.

Being kept busy we have been made happier, the time has passed more swiftly and we shall be delivered to the people fully equipped to do all kinds of dental work.

Every member of the class of 1906 had the greatest respect and most kindly feeling for each and every member of our faculty and all join in extending them our heartfelt thanks for the favors and interest they have shown us.

Wishing the College of Dentistry and all other departments of the great University of Illinois many more prosperous years, we are

THE CLASS OF 1906.

The School of Pharmacy

ON September 28th, 1905 there assembled at the College building 101 candidates eager to be in the profession which is known as the science pharmaceutical, and hoping some day to have Ph.G., C.P. attached to their names.

Most all of them thought they knew a lot about it, but when the laboratories opened they learned better, for some way the crucibles and test tubes would break while they only looked at them. They also expected nine or ten dollars back from their laboratory deposit, but now they think nine or ten cents would not be bad.

When we went into the pharmacy laboratory we learned the four rules of that domain mighty quick, viz:

1. No spitting on the floor.
1. No masticating Yucatan.
3. No exhaling in warbling clusters.
4. No "Sweet Caps" or "Dukes Misery" to be burned.

When we listened to Professor Goodman and gazed on that "Quaker Oat Smile" we also learned that he would stand no "goo goo eyes" at the Royal Tailors.

When we saw Dr. Rogers and the calcined remains of a representative of the human race in the physiological lecture hall we all sighed, for we thought this would kill our Ph.G. in '07.

We took Professor Puckner's advice on chemical apparatus for we knew, if we could remember, it would be to our financial benefit.

Some way the work passed along and Christmas vacation came and we went home to try to work Dad for a larger allowance for new books????? etc.

Personalities

If Hallberg can't find his black board pointer, send Jackson for Rudolph.

"That" laugh that won't come off—Polk—Eh eh H—H—H—Hay.

It takes Hallberg's Ferrated Tincture of Gall to make that "600% on precipitations or lose money."

Everybody works but "Father."

Snow—"What is a preparation of Iodine"?

Freshman,—"Idiotic Acid."

We have often wondered if Professor Hallberg's jokes were original or not but now we have learned he reads the "Hall Room Boys" page in "The all day and night."

Wolinsky and Goodman—the original Hall Room Boys.

If Herbster's time was money he'd be a Rockefeller.

Professor Puckner is no doubt an analytical chemist, but we believe he has some thoughts on astronomy or may be he counts the fly specks on the ceiling during the chemistry lecture.

A study in nomenclature (and pronunciation)—Krzmieniewski, Czeslawski, Kopezynski and Jusajtus.

'Twas just before vacation
In the winter of 1905,
When the students of Pharmacy
Thought they couldn't survive
The final examination,
And the rest that were to come;
But we succeeded in thinking
Our thoughts were on the bum.

So we arranged a "smoker"
With students all in line,—
Fruit and cigars in plenty
And everything that's fine;
But things went topsy turvy,
For boys are rude, you know,
And things that are exiting
Do certainly have to go.

'Twas cold as Greenland down there,
And yet 'twas like a dream,
For we had faint recollections
Of "Hallberg's" patent steam.
The smoke in the rooms was frightful
But it came from Havana ropes—
But I am positive it was better
Than our punk Chemistry dopes.

We took our examinations,
And to our greatest delight,
We passed in every study
Then took our homeward flight;
To spend that short vacation
With our parents ever kind,
And (Goodman's gentle reminder)
The girl we left behind.

THE CLASS OF 1907

The Class of '07 was organized in October '05. The officers elected are as follows:

President, - - - -	WYLIE WILLIAMSON
Vice-President, - - - -	K. E. ANDERSON
Treasurer, - - - -	BERTON BEAMAN
Secretary, - - - -	BERTHA REISMAN
Editors, - - - -	T. E. P. FURMAN AND A. S. BOYER
Sergeants-at-arms - - - -	C F. KINGERY AND H. PFAFF, JR.

Great interest was shown in the organization.

On the day of the Illinois-Chicago football game, the classes were dismissed and we all went out to Marshall Field to help along Illinois with our “Pharmacy, pharmacy,

Well I guess
Illinois, Illinois,
Yes, Yes, Yes ”

We didn't forget “Os-ky-wow-wow” either.

At a meeting December 12th a class smoker was arranged to be held December 18th. Well, on that night a jolly good crowd was found in the Histology Laboratory at the college building. After the cigars, refreshments and pipes made the rounds, those specially good at “pipe stories” were called on and those songs and stories were certainly “pipes.”

The college glee club was organized under the leadership of Mr. Anderson.

The February meeting of the Illinois State Pharmacy Board found many “I” students there for their exams, most of whom succeeded in making their A.P.S.

The class of '07 promises to be one of the most successful and best organized classes ever at the college.

We believe we have as able a corps of instructors in our School of Pharmacy as there is in any school of its kind in the West. We have received the best of personal attention and have had the use of modern and up-to-date apparatus and have been made to understand that it is the “Modern Way,” that wins.

Varsity Football Team

THE FOOT BALL SEASON OF 1905

By J. M. LINDGREN

FOOTBALL in the season of 1905 was the most disastrous in point of games lost, that we ever experienced at the University of Illinois. The Freshman eligibility rule, which deprived Illinois of the services of all football talent in the incoming class, was in very great measure the cause of this. Moreover, the four year rule cut out Captain Fairweather, Ex-Captain Rothgeb, Kasten and Huntoon, while Hazlewood, Deaner, Dillinger, Taylor and Sheppard and many subs, failed to return to school in the fall. This left only Captain Moynihan, Captain-elect Carrithers, Young, Burroughs. and

Kirk as a nucleus with which to build up a team.

All the teams of the Big Nine with which Illinois played, far outclassed her in weight and experience, and so each game left our team in weaker condition than in the preceding one. But the fighting spirit was here, and never once did the men show a disposition to quit.

EX-CAPTAIN MOYNIHAN

Illinois met Michigan last fall for the first time since 1899. New bleachers, with a seating capacity of five thousand were erected; the game was extensively advertised throughout central Illinois, and on November 4, the largest crowd that ever assembled on Illinois field, witnessed the contest with our old time rivals. Illinois fought hard, and at times out-played Michigan, but owing to the fact that Michigan had eleven M men on her team and out-weighed Illinois twenty-five pounds to the man, Yost's men won the day. Captain Moynihan's wretched condition, Captain-elect Carrither's injury, also had some influence on the work of the team and its apparent lack of spirit.

In no game except the one with Nebraska, did Captain Moynihan play in his usual form; Carrither's absence in the Purdue game exercised a depressing effect on the team. The latter's punting was particularly missed, for three touchdowns in that game, were the result of punts, poorly gotten off.

Illinois received her worst defeat at the hands of Chicago, mainly due to Eckersall's generalship, and the marvelous accuracy of his drop kicks. Establishing not only the best record in his own career, but perhaps setting a world's record, he sent the oval straight over the bar five times out of six attempts. Eckersall alone made twenty-six points for his team in the Illinois game.

"A dispenser of the social smile, and sympathetic tear"—FLORENCE PITTS.

The outlook for the 1906 football season is much more promising. All of the 1905 Freshmen, some of whom have considerable ability, will be eligible, and few of the veterans will be missing. The recent football agitation has left Illinois unaffected

A write up of the 1905 team would be incomplete without mention of the high scholarship of its members. On authority, it can be said, that the team received fewer conditions, in proportion to the number of players than the remainder of the student body; in fact it had a much higher scholastic standing than the average student, which cannot be said of any other football team in the west, or of any team Illinois has ever had.

In view of these considerations, was it not a team of which Illinois may justly feel proud?

1905 BASEBALL SEASON

HE same question, as in previous years, came up with the opening of the 1905 baseball room. Would "G" be able to turn out another championship team? The outlook was certainly very discouraging. The new summer baseball rule started the trouble in the fall by the barring of Pfeffer, Warner, Cook and Byers. These four were "I" men and would have been valuable for the 1905 team. While in returning from his Xmas vacation, the captain, "Red" Roberts was killed in a railroad wreck. This was certainly the worst blow that could have been dealt to the baseball team. With all this misfortune, there were only Rothgeb and Taylor left from the 1904 team.

The indoor practice commenced about the middle of January and continued until March 10. After two weeks of preliminary practice out of doors, they commenced a series of 12 games with the Minneapolis league team on April 1. The series proved very satisfactory, as the team won and lost seven games. It was now evident that the team was going to make a good showing.

The college season opened on April 14 with Wabash, the game was easily won by a score of 11-2. This was followed by another easy game with Purdue, the score being 5-1. On the first trip away from home the nine defeated Northwestern 5-0, and Wisconsin 3-0. The team was showing up in grand style and the chances of a championship team commenced to be the talk about the campus. Just after this trip, in our first practice game at home, Gunning and Taylor sprained their ankles, and were out of the game for 5 weeks.

The next game was with Chicago on Illinois Field. It seemed as though the team would win and at the start of the ninth inning the score was 11-0 in our favor; but at this point Chicago started a batting rally, and with some errors they scored 9 runs, and it was only through some fine fielding by Rothgeb that the game was saved from defeat. The game was won by the score 11-9.

The team left Champaign on April 28 to play with Michigan at Ann Arbor on the following day. This game was looked forward to with interest, for if the team could win this game, there would be hopes of winning the championship. The ill luck was still with us, when Dicke was injured and unable to play and Opfergelt went from the box to short-stop, Bushnell finishing the game in the box. The game was lost 3-1. The defeat was due mostly to the fine pitching of Sanger of the Michigan team. On the same trip we won from Armour Institute 9-3, Northwestern 8-1, and Wisconsin 6-3.

The second Michigan game took place on Illinois Field on May 6, and was the hardest fought game of the season. Bushnell was pitching against the "invincible" Sanger. Their work was on a par, but the luck seemed to be against us, and Michigan won 1-0. In order then to tie for the championship it was necessary to win the next two games from Michigan. The team left for Ann Arbor to play on May 17. It rained on that day and the game was postponed until the next day. The game was lost by the close score of 2-1. Just before this game the disqualification of Dicke and Opfergelt dealt a very severe blow to the team. This defeat was followed by two more, one with Wisconsin, 2-1, the other with Chicago, 2-0. The team did not quit, but fought hard, and won the rest of their games. The next game was with Wisconsin on May 20, and will not soon be forgotten, for it was in this game that Rothgeb

"College life is hard on a fellow,—It's just Work, Work, Work, all the time,"— came back to his batting form of the previous year and knocked out a home run, which won the game, the score being 1-0.

The last Michigan game was played here on May 31. Bushnell was in the box for Illinois and through his fine pitching and the good batting of the team back of him, the game was won by the score 7-3. The last college game was played on Marshall Field with Chicago on June 7. It was a very ragged game, but Illinois finally won out by the score of 11-8.

In summing up the score, the team did remarkably well; they won 15 out of 20 games. No game was lost by more than two scores. The team lacked the characteristic aggressiveness of previous Illinois ball-teams. This however, can be well accounted for, the team was made up almost entirely of new men. The team did not win the championship, but they finished a very good second.

1905 TRACK TEAM

By THOMAS PEEBLES

THE Track Team for 1905 began training for the indoor season with fair prospects. As the work progressed several freshmen showed considerable ability and the old men improved steadily.

The first meet with Chicago was won by Illinois by the score of 49 to 37. The result was quite a surprise but the victory was well earned, as the results show. Five gymnasium records were broken and two others equalled and these marks were all made by Illinois men. The best performance was by Gilkerson who ran two miles in 10:02.

Two weeks later the teams met at Chicago and again Illinois won. With only the pole vault and the relay to be decided the score was 38 to 34 in favor of Chicago. The relay looked like a sure thing for Chicago and apparently Illinois had no chance to win the meet. Mackey who ran first in the relay for Illinois sprang a surprise by gaining 15 yards on Hogenson. Chicago's other three men tried hard to regain the distance but failed. After a long contest in the pole vault, Norris won from Wilkins. Grear went 4 inches higher than he had ever gone before and beat Clark for third.

A team of ten men went to St. Louis but all were so heavily penalized by the handicapper that they failed to bring home any prizes. At the I. A. C. meet in Chicago, Woodin won the broad jump and Gilkerson finished second in the two mile after being compelled to give liberal handicaps to all his opponents.

Chicago won the outdoor meet at Marshall Field by the score of 77 to 49. The work of the Illinois team was up to the usual standard but Chicago had the best team in her history and they were all in excellent condition.

On May 12th Purdue was defeated on Illinois Field by the score of 84 to 41. No remarkable performances were made but it was shown that Illinois had a strong well balanced team. The freshmen won 6 of the 9 firsts taken by Illinois and scored a total of 40 points.

A week later Illinois defeated Wisconsin for the first time, the score being 84 to 42. As in the Purdue meet, the victory was due to the fact that Illinois had a well balanced team. Carrithers put the shot 42 ft. 6 in. Smith went two miles in 10:07 and four Illinois men cleared over 21 ft. 6 in. in the broad jump.

In the conference meet Norris tied with Glover of Purdue for first in the pole-vault at 11 ft. 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ in., and Knox was third in the shot-put.

It was much regretted by all that Captain Melin was unable to compete. His work in 1904 had shown that he was the peer of any two miler in the west and great things were expected of him. While training for the first meet he strained a tendon, and was unable to run again during the indoor season. He tried hard to get into condition for the outdoor season but after a week of training was compelled to give it up. His loss was keenly felt, especially in the outdoor meet with Chicago and in the Conference meet.

The credit for the successful season was largely due to the efforts of Coach Gill. His success in developing new men and in correcting the faults of older ones has been remarkable. The development of the raw material that reported for work in January into a team which twice defeated the strongest team Chicago ever had is an achievement which only close followers of athletics can appreciate.

DEPUY AND WARE DOING THE HURDLES

OUR TRACK COACH: HARRY GILL

By C. J. MOYNIHAN

IT TAKES less natural ability to become a good track-man, than to reach perfection in any other line of athletics," is an assertion so often made and exemplified that it has come to be looked upon as a truism. It often happens that embryo athletes who show little or no ability at the beginning, by consistent training and practice equal or break records in the events in which they specialize, before they leave school. This kind of material very seldom amounts to much, however, unless some one who can judge of its fitness, directs it along lines from which the most good will be derived. People who can act as coach in this respect are few indeed. Illinois has one twenty-four carats fine in Harry Gill, who knows just exactly how to judge and develop latent ability.

COACH HARRY GILL

It has only been of late that the majority of athletic enthusiasts, surprised at the wonderful showing made by the Illini track team, have resorted to the question, "Who is Gill?" If they had but followed his athletic career from the time that he began to participate in muscular events, no such query would be necessary.

Coach Harry Gill was born in Coldwater, Ontario, and is thirty years old. As a youth he had no phenomenal athletic ability, but developed himself gradually, attaining prominence only after years of careful preparation. He first gained notice at New York City in July, 1900, when he annexed the all-around American championship. On August 14 of the same year at Toronto, Canada, he established his supremacy among the pick of Canadian athletes, thus proving himself to be the best all-around athlete on the American continent. In the fall of the year 1900 he went to the University of Iowa and developed one of the best teams the Hawkeyes had in years. His success would have been more pronounced had he stayed there more than a year, but he signed a two year contract to coach the Beloit track squad.

During this time he kept the good reputation he had established in New York City and Toronto by winning the world's championship in the discus throw at Buffalo in 1901, and the all-around American professional championship at Boston, on August 2, 1902.

While at Beloit his work so attracted the attention of Director Huff that the latter secured him to take charge in 1904 of what in the past had been the most unsuccessful department of Illinois athletics. One needs only to be aware of the outcome of the dual meets in which we have participated since he came, to know the result of his coming and realize the sensational progress made under his tutelage.

The first year four out of seven meets were won; the second year Gill's ability became more apparent and as a consequence, four out of a possible five meets were annexed, among the victims being Chicago, who for the first time in her history suffered defeat indoors twice at the hands of the Orange and Blue; Wisconsin and

"A sweet, dear child."—VIRGINIA TAYLOR.

Purdue both succumbed at outdoor meets to Illinois' already established prowess, the latter leading by a comfortable margin of points in each case.

The track season just passing promises to be the most successful Illinois ever had. True the Chicago papers contained no glad tidings heralding the decision of some star athlete to enter our university. On paper our claims appeared unfavorable. Chicago with Steffens, Kelley, Iddings, Williamson, and others of varying athletic caliber gave promise of carrying triumphantly the maroon colors throughout the season. In both meets with us, however, the maroon colors have bowed humbly to the proteges of Coach Gill. It seems to make little difference whether the battle is waged in our own gymnasium or in theirs, for the last four indoor track meets have been held alternately in the two gymnasiums.

This success of ours is not due to any improvement in quality of our athletes as compared with track teams previous to Gill's coming. Such men as DePuy, Burroughs, Gilkerson, Smith, Knox, Woodin and Grear were men of only medium caliber when they first enrolled under Gill. The improvement of each bears the stamp of Gill's work. DePuy showed his heels in clever style to the much touted Steffens, in the hurdles; Burroughs, a rugged clumsy giant at the beginning, after assiduous working gives promise of being a top notcher in the weight events before ineligibility bars him and what has been said of the foregoing, as regards improvement, may as truly be said of Gilkerson, Smith, Knox, Woodin and Grear in their special events.

That Gill is an all round track coach is shown by the varied number of individual feats he performs and the records he has made in them. In the discus he has a record of 130 ft. 6 inches; over the bar he has high jumped 6 ft. 1½ inches, which mark won him the championship of Canada in the individual events, as did his shot put record of 45 ft. 8 inches; his broad jump record of 22 ft. 2 inches; his 120 yard hurdle race in 16¾ seconds; and his hammer throw of 145 feet. The marks, remember, were made independent of any attempts at all round championship honors.

He is greatly admired by all men who have received instruction from him. He has no favorites, a man's ability being his only requirement.

Director Huff, conservative as he is, who thinks Gill is the best track coach in the country considering the material with which he has to work, says that he never saw a coach that could get as much work out of a man as Gill. Gill doesn't get near the credit he deserves, "because he is so unassuming" the Big One goes on to say.

In these days of frenzied athletics when accusations are openly made against both athletes and coaches, charging dissensions, favoritism, and proselyting, one has but to look at Illinois to find a coach who absolutely refuses even to make a man an offer, or to encourage any one else to do so, as his record will show. More such men are needed in athletics where their well directed influence will result in the elimination of the adverse comment on present day athletics.

"Arise and shake the hayseed from thy locks."—O'REAR.

THE BASKET BALL SEASON

IN December, 1905, Mr. Leo G. Hana issued the call for candidates for the first men's basket ball team at the University of Illinois. In response to his call over one hundred men registered for practice, which number was gradually decreased to fifteen, nine for the 'Varsity and five for a second team. The squad was in charge of Mr. Hana, with Riley acting captain until January 20, 1906, when a professional basketball coach was employed for the remainder of the season. The first game was played in Illinois gymnasium on January 20 with the University of Indiana five, who were beaten by a score of 27 to 24. Much of the credit for the victory belongs to Riley who with Mr. Hana had charge of the candidates. Next Purdue was taken into camp in a rough game, and then the strong Wheaton College team was defeated by a close score. Kays who had been elected captain now left college, and "Jimmy" Ray was elected his successor.

The team was unfortunate during the trip which followed. Several of the regular men sustained severe injuries, and as four fast games were played on successive nights, all were physically worn out. Games were lost to Minnesota and Evanston Y. M. C. A., Chicago, and Wheaton. Three days after the return from the trip, Oberlin was barely defeated and the team left for Lafayette and Bloomington, Ind., where both Purdue and Indiana won in rough games. One week later, the men having taken a wonderful brace, Chicago was beaten in Illinois gymnasium, and the hopes for a championship team were revived, only to be shattered by a loss to Minnesota after the game was practically won. This defeat did not dishearten the players as might be expected, and the veteran Wisconsin team barely scratched out a victory by a score of 35 to 32.

Of the thirteen games played, five were won and eight lost. In the Conference membership seven games were played, and two were won, thus ranking Illinois fourth in the championship column. Altogether the 'Varsity scored 297 points and its opponents 428. Of the players, Tallmage has the best record in points scored—114. Penn is second with 81, and Riley third with 58. Stewart and Ray each scored 18, Juul 10, Ryan 8, Dadant 4. Of the guards, Dadant's record is best, his forwards throwing but ten baskets in six games played.

Taking into consideration the injuries sustained, the close schedule followed, the inexperience of the players, the loss of Kays and Ray, and the neverfailing hard luck which haunted the team, the results of the season are on the whole satisfactory. Present indications are that in the future there will not be such a lack of material as hampered the coach this season, and he is confidently expected to turn out a championship team in 1907.

ORATORY AND DEBATING AT ILLINOIS

By F. R. W.

IF ILLINOIS may boast rightfully of her achievements in certain spheres of activity and along certain lines, in no department may she boast more justly than in that of oratory and debating—a record of five university debates in the past two years and only one lost—and the victories won from institutions similar in kind and character to our own. Rivals whose ability is not to be despised, nor their strength underestimated.

Training, preparation, and efficient coaching; these are the things which are essential in inter-collegiate debating. With these, of necessity must go a feeling of determination and aggressiveness; a firm conviction of the dignity of the contest; and its relative importance in gauging university standards and ideals. These are the things which make for pre-eminence in debating. Probably to no one man is more credit due for the present situation at Illinois than to the present instructor in that department, Mr. J. Q. Adams.

For many years Illinois has participated in university debates. Also we have had debates in the past with the Universities of Iowa and Missouri. Horner, Pletcher, Holmes and Reef are but a few of the many men of ability who have represented Illinois in the past; and whether winning or losing they have borne their parts with honor to themselves and credit to their university. It is, however, of recent years that victory has begun to be looked upon more as a moral certainty—a victory as a matter of possibility and probability—a defeat, as a remote contingency.

No one could well have listened to the Iowa-Illinois debate of 1904 without feeling that our team on that occasion, Moschel, Doedin, and Dorman, were setting up a new and higher standard for debating at Illinois. A more thorough grasp of the subject, a more complete mastery of details, more spontaneous work, more real, true debating spirit were the characteristics of the new advent of things in debating circles.

The work of Rodman, Renick and Lucas, of the Indiana team for the same year, was no less noticeable. More thoroughly constructive, broadly comprehensible work is seldom seen in any debating team than that which marked the work of those men.

With the last debate of 1904 came our only defeat for that season. But if Missouri won from Etherton, Mehren and Melton, no discredit can be reflected upon the defenders of the Orange and Blue. Even a closely contested debate must be lost by one of the teams.

For the year 1905 Illinois had only two inter-university debates. These were with the universities of Indiana and Missouri. Indiana was especially well represented. As a result our annual debate with that institution was a most spirited and hotly contested one. The students turned out, filling the Chapel; and Gilbert, Storms and Ross, catching the spirit of enthusiasm, won midst great excitement.

The victory over Missouri for the same season was of a most decisive nature, Helm opening the debate for Illinois in a strong, vigorous fashion, and McGinley closing it in a manner rarely equalled in university debating.

The work so creditably left off by that team was taken up, though in a slightly different manner, at the opening of the present university year—when Jacob Cantlin won second place in the Hamilton Oratorical Contest. When one stops to think that such institutions as the Universities of Chicago, Michigan, Wisconsin and Northwestern are our competitors ; and that the contest is open to twenty-five thousand students, Illinois may well be proud of Cantlin's work in this event.

"Looks good to father."—ANNE WHITE.

The teams that represented Illinois in her debates this year were Samuels, Gregory and Little, for the Indiana contest ; and McGinley, Reardon and Wiley for the Ohio contest. There are men of ability, indomitable courage and perseverance on both teams.

With the inspiration, encouragement, and zeal that comes from the enthusiasm of the student body ; and backed by that loyal Illinois spirit which manifests itself alike on the athletic field and in the forensic meet, the standard of debating and oratory at Illinois will not be lowered. Whether she is the winner of one or of two victories she may well be proud of the work of her teams.

"Her idea of an interesting entertainment is a monologue by herself."—

THE YEAR IN ORATORY AND DEBATE

BY J. Q. ADAMS.

IN DEBATE and oratory, the year has been a successful one. Messrs. Ewing, Moynihan and Cantlin early in October vigorously contested for the opportunity to represent the University before the Hamilton Club, of Chicago. In this, Jacob Cantlin, a senior in the College of Law, was successful. From that date, until he appeared on the program in Steinway Hall, January 11, he was most faithful to the trust the University imposed in him. In the past Illinois had, in composition, pushed the other contestants, but had been unable to secure a speaking place (four only of the representatives of the nine competing universities being given that distinction). This year our representative, together with representatives from Iowa, Indiana and Wisconsin Universities, secured the coveted honor. Then began the struggle in real earnest, Mr. Cantlin giving his best efforts. So desirous was he that the reputation of Illinois should not suffer at his hands that he sacrificed his entire Christmas vacation. Persistent, pains-taking effort resulted in a victory, the judges awarding Mr. Cantlin the second prize.

We may well be proud, also, of our debating teams. By an arrangement with Ohio State and Indiana Universities a three cornered league had been established. The contract provides for a common question, and for each University a team on each side of the question, and a debate with each of the other institutions of learning. The question selected was federal control of the life insurance business. F. R. Wiley, C. H. Reardon, and William

J. Q. ADAMS

McGinley, with L. D. Howell as alternate, composed our affirmative team. They defeated Ohio State's team in the Chapel, March 9. At the same time our negative team, R. F. Little, W. H. Gregory, and T. W. Samuels, with A. H. Dähler as alternate, suffered defeat at the hands of Indiana, at Bloomington. Our opponents selected their strongest debaters to meet us. At Urbana the contest was certain; at Bloomington the decision was in doubt. Both our teams were thoroughly prepared; both spoke with vigor and authority ; both represented well their Alma Mater. The individual debaters and the alternates as well, deserve every word of commendation we can bestow.

To win from such a team as Ohio State presented is a high honor ; to be defeated by the especially strong Indiana team is no disgrace, and to be the only institution of learning in the state represented in the final contest of the Hamilton Club, and in that contest to take second place among the universities of the middle-west, is an enviable record. This, in brief, is the history of the year. It may not be all that might be hoped for, yet it is sufficient for favorable commendation and congratulation.

IN THE GARDEN

PRIZE STORY

HOW quiet it was in the old garden. The sun shone warmly down on close-cut hedge, and trim grass-plot, and beds of quaint, old-fashioned flowers, steeping in delicious, dreamy content the girl who sat idly there with her book in her lap.

Breaking in rudely upon the peace and calm, came the sound of a woman's voice,—repressed but trembling with excitement.

"Virginny, Virginny, are you there?"

"Here, Auntie," answered the girl, rising in alarm at the agitation of the stout, middle-aged woman who came hurrying into sight.

"What has happened?"

"Who in the world do you think has showed up again?", panted the woman, "Who, but Jasper Arnold!" She watched the girl anxiously as told her news; but beyond a slight flush of surprise, she could detect no sign of emotion.

"I left him in the parlor," she went on: "I told him I wasn't sure you was anywhere about, but that I'd go and look. If you don't want to see him"——

"Of course I'll see him, Auntie," interrupted the girl gently. "Why not? Tell him that I am here in the garden."

The older woman hurried away, nodding her head, with a curiously mingled expression of relief and triumph on her face.

"She'll do," she murmured to herself.

The girl waited quietly in her place as the man came toward her. He was the same,—and yet not the same, she decided in one swift glance. He carried himself with the same, proud, easy grace, but his face was older and sterner than when he went away.

The man scarcely repressed an exclamation of astonishment at the sight of the tall, womanly figure before him. But he recovered himself instantly, and came forward with his hat in his hand.

"Pardon me," he said, bowing low,—“I am looking for a little maid in a pink sun-bonnet. Can you tell me where to find her?"

"She is gone," answered the girl, "and only I am left in her place."

The man drew back, involuntarily, as before his mind flashed the vision of a young face, white and drawn, the sad, wistful eyes belying the bravely smiling lips. If the girl, too, saw the vision, she made no sign. Her face was quiet and serene, and from her clear eye looked a spirit calmly unafraid, strong through the mastery of self and sorrow.

"A face like a benediction."—A. B. DORMAN

"It is good to see you again. Will you sit down?" she was saying. Her tone was cordial and sincere, but she did not offer her hand. They seated themselves side by side on the garden bench, as old friends newly met again, with many questions of the years of absence.

"I have come a long way," said the man, "to tell the little maid a story. Will you listen instead?"

"We have no secrets from each other," the girl replied. She spoke wonderingly, and there was a hint of reserve in her tone. Then, as the man hesitated, seeking for words, the spirit of her old-time playfulness came upon the girl, and she smiled a frank, friendly smile.

"Once upon a time," she prompted. Then the years slipped back, and the little maid listened again to her friend and tutor.

"Thank you," he said earnestly as he began.

"Once upon a time there was a man"——

"A Prince," chided the girl.

A slight smile softened for an instant the man's stern mouth, as he acknowledged the correction.

"Once upon a time there was a Prince who was very rich, and who had always been petted and spoiled. So he grew up proud and haughty,—thinking that wealth and high place were the greatest things in the world. But, at last, even he, grew weary for a time of the pomp and show, and he travelled away to the country in disguise. Here he met a Princess, a real Princess, though he in his blindness could not see; and he pitied her for her quiet simple life, the wisdom of which he could not understand, and began to teach her the lighter wisdom of the great world outside. She learned, oh, so fast! Never had he seen one so clever."

The girl made an impatient gesture, and the man went on more hurriedly, as if in fear of being interrupted.

"At length the Prince found that he was beginning to care a great deal for the little maid."

"Mr. Arnold," the girl spoke warningly.

"Let me finish," pleaded the man, "for my own self-respect."

The girl listened again, with averted face.

"He began to care a great deal for the little maid, and he felt that he might some day win her love. But, when he thought of his wealth and position and of his proud, cold family, and the girl whom they expected him to marry, and he was afraid. So he trampled on the greatest good and happiness that his life had ever known—and he went away. He was a poor, weak coward!”

The man’s composure gave way for the instant, and he spoke through his clenched teeth :

“God! he was such a coward!”

A moment’s pause, and he went on again, quietly as before.

“He told himself that the little maid was only a child, and would soon forget; and he hoped that he, too, could forget.”

Again the man struggled for self-possession, and then, casting aside all pretense, he poured forth his words tumultuously.

“Virginia, I have been around the world since then, but I have not forgotten. Among gay crowds, or alone in desert places, it has been the same. I have cared for nothing but the sight of your face,—the sound of your voice. I have come to know that you are more to me than anything else in the world,—and I have tried to be more worthy of you. I came back wishing I might find you unchanged, but determined, however I found you, if you were still free, to tell you that I love you, that I have always loved you, and to ask you to be my wife. Am I too late? Do you despise me too much? You cannot despise me more than I have despised myself. Virginia, what can you say to me?”

The girl shrank back before his passion. She could not doubt his sincerity; and oh, the pathos of it! A pang of pitying tenderness thrilled her heart at the thought of the little maid, and of this love that would have meant so much to her—this love that came too late.

Even in her wildest dreams of happiness she had scarcely imagined this hour; she, child though she was then, bowed down in grief and humiliation for a love that she could not hide. But she was too true and womanly to feel anything but pity now for the man who thus humbled himself before her. Noble and manly as he now seemed, he could never be the same to her as before—her girlish idol had long since hopelessly turned to clay—and even with her sorrow for him came a thrill of joy at thought of another, noblier and manlier still.

“How could I despise you?” she said gently, at last.

“You who helped me more than any friend I ever had? I should never have cared for the best things if you had not taught me. When you went away,”—her voice trembled but she went on bravely, “I was so lonely, and

“A mind tossed upon the winds of foolishness.”—BESS STIPES

I thought that my heart would break. I was very young then. But even the suffering helped me to make the most of myself. I wanted you, someday, to be proud of me."

"And now?" said the man.

The girl hesitated, seeking for words that would spare him pain.

"It is hard to understand one's heart," she faltered at last. "There are so many dreams and visions, and sometimes one cannot tell the false from the true, but when the King comes," —

She paused in a silence that was more eloquent than words. The man understood. His face had suddenly grown white and set, but he answered quite steadily :

"Long live the King!"

LOVE'S MISSION

Prize Poem

On ceaseless mission to and fro
The little love-god flies;—
A mocking mirth illumining
The star-depths of his eyes.

He comes to many a life, unsought,
Yet none shall say him nay:
Our hearts wake to his summoning
As flower-buds to the day.

He comes, and lo—for weal or woe,
The path before us lies:
And though we tread in sorrow oft,
With tears and sacrifice,

Fair, heavenly missions come to greet
Our world-worn, weary eyes;
For Love is God's interpreter
Of holy Paradise.

SUNSET

2nd Prize Poem

Sprite of the salt sea foam,
Flicker, and dance thy fling,—
The dip of the western sun will bring
A summons to call thee home.

Wind of the secret sea,
Whisper thy vagrant tale,—
For soon when the West begins to pale
A spirit shall silence thee.

Cloud of the serried sky,
Marshal thy red and gold,—
The fire of thy hue will soon grow cold
And all thy glory die.

Heart of mine, take thy thrill,
Tumultuous leap in my breast,—
For Shadows ere long will call thee to rest
And God shall say, "Be still."

D. H. RICH

“ D E Z ”

By T. H. K.

Well, “Dez” came home from school last night,
Came wakin’ in jes’ after nine;
Say, it was good fer my old sight
To see that husky boy o’ mine.
His name ain’t “Dez”, they dubbed him that
Down there in what he calls “his Frat”.

I like his grip, it’s good an’ strong;
I like his steady, level look;
But my! his pants are big an’ long
He rolls his sleeves up like a cook.
I told his “Mom” to watch her chance
An’ try an’ doctor up them pants.

It does beat all how college can
In such a very little time,
Change a boy into a man
The way it has this boy o’ mine.
But I can’t see no sense at all
In pants so big and cap so small.

We had a talk today, we did,
A quiet, confidential chat;
The conversation at last slid
Around to that there college “Frat”;
I said to him “That ‘Frat’ addition,
I somehow look on with suspicion.”

This Sigma Tau you talk about
I think you said ’at it was Greek,
In what way does it help you out?
How much does it cost me a week?”
“The object of the ‘Sigma Tau’
Is social and to lend eclat.”

I do not know what “eclaw” is,
Some sort o’ engineer I suppose,
Or maybe ’tis a word o’ his
To show his dad how much he knows.
I’ll write it down an’ ask his “Mom”,
She’ll know jes’ where he got it from.

I guess ’at “Frats” from all I hear
Are mostly boys an’ noise an’ din,
With lots o’ pipes an’ cards an’ beer,
An’ once a week a “hop” throwed in.
The song they sing so rich an’ mellow,
Is “For he’s a jolly good fellow.”

“The Grand Stand Boys.”—THE PHI DELTS.

Well, "Dez" has packed his dressin' case
An' gone once more to Illinoy;
His mother, tearv 'bout the face,
Is pickin' up after her boy;
The reason why my spirits sank
Was my shrinkin' balance at the bank.

We stay at home, both "Mom" and I
Fer parties she don't seem to care
I guess I know the reason why,
She ain't jes' got things fit to wear;
An' she won't buy no things to use,
While all the girls are needin' shoes.

The grandest thing on this old earth,
Sent down to man from Heaven above,
(But children seldom see its worth)
Is mother's pure unstinted love;
It makes me hope that once again
A life awaits them free from pain.

A letter came from "Dez" today,
Its contents made my old heart glad,
I'll read you what he has to say;
See, he begins it, "Dear Old Dad:—
I've found some work which I can do,
'Twill make it easier for you.

So when you send my check again,
Just cut it, father, most in half,"
(From smilin' I cannot refrain,
This next line also makes me laugh);
"Of course, if I get out of work,
It's going to leave me rather short."

His mother says to judge from that,
He's more than just an engineer;
He's somewhat of a diplomat,
A rather deep one, too, I fear;
Diplomacy, she says, is tact,
An' knowin' how an' when to act.

He says, "Come down and see the 'U'
And get acquainted with the boys;
We have fine buildings, old and new,
The campus is one of our joys."
I'll drop in on them boys some morn
Es soon es I can husk my corn.

"The Mask of Comus."—ZINK'S FACE.

I jes' got back from that air town,
Down near the center o' the state,
Where farmers' boys hope for renown,
An' where they train an' edicate;
The school 's a big one, an' I see
Jes' where I have lost out, By Gee!

I learned that opertunity
Knocks once at least on every door,
An' if you are asleep, why she
Goes on an' don't come back no more;
I must 'a ben a sleepin' sound
By Hen! I never heard her pound.

Now, I don't think it can be so,
She is I believe a sleepy jade,
Ef one is full o' fire an' go,
Wy opertunity is made.
Ef I again my youth could plan
I'd be a well bred college man.

But this ain't tellin' you about
My visit to the "Tau Sig Frat",
Those friends o' "Dezry's" all turned out
An' gave me such a welcome that
I felt the University
An' whole blame thing belonged to me.

An' "Dez" was not ashamed for he Actually looked glad an' proud
As he was interducin' me
His "Farmer Dad" to all that crowd;
You ain't embarrassed any when
You meet up with true gentlemen.

Dez is so fussy 'bout his clothes,
Most every day he does some pressin'
His pants hang up side down in rows,
An' watchin' him set me to guessin';
So I sez "Dez", while he was brushin',
"Who is the female you air rushin'?"

"Now don't you fret, Dad, over that,
We'll come to that bridge maybe later,
Down here I only love my "Frat",
(Then he owned up, "and Alma Mater").
Sez I "Don't tell your 'Mom', No sir!
Les' try an' keep it hid from her.

"This 'Almy Mater', who is she?
Name sounds as if she might be Dutch;
Wish you would show the minx to me,
An' does she take your time up much?
He sort o' laughed and said "Yes sir,
Most of my time I spend with her."

"A very gentle, modest, and demure little maid." (?) —KITTY MANN.

Then I got mad an' sez "See here,
 I don't kick on your bein' toney,
 I'll put up fer an engineer
 But not fer no dern matrimony".
 I stomped an' swore about the place
 While tears o' mirth ran down his face.
 Said he "Dad, keep your shirt on, do,
 Tomorrow morning after class,
 We'll walk the college buildings through,
 And maybe meet the little lass ;
 And after that, if you still hate her,
 I'll bid good-bye to Alma Mater."

Well, arter that I cooled off some,
 An' went an' sat down by the grate,
 Where after supper the boys come
 An' tales o' weal an' woe relate ;
 The glow, the fellowship, the charm,
 Filled me, an' I forgot the farm.

We sat there singin' songs, by Hen !
 An' tellin' stories old an' new,
 Till I was 'most a boy agin,
 An' acted like a big one too ;
 Well anyway they voted me
 A pledge in their fraternity.

It speaks well for self government
 When forty healthy boys and strong,
 Will pull together in content
 And none o' them go very wrong;
 For it means months and months o' trial
 Of self restraint an' self denial.

I've learned a Frat House often is
 A quiet, cheerful, happy home;
 Where earnest boys get down to "biz,"
 An' homesick ones ain't left alone;
 Where Freshmen have the work to do,
 An' the Seniors see they do it, too

Next morning, just as Dezry planned,
 He walked me over all creation;
 He showed me stone, cement an' sand
 Had proved the strength o' their relation,
 An' all the time 'twas getting later
 An' still no sign o' Almy Mater.

Right out in front o' Armory Hall,
 I took my hat off to "Old Glory";
 It is most beautiful of all
 The flags told of in song an' story;
 An' Dezry also bared his head,
 "I'll follow where it leads," he said.

An' then we went into the "Gym,"
For ath-e-letics it's exclusive.
I sez to "Dez," sez I to him,
"Is glory easy or elusive?"
Sez he, "No glory can be had Without a lot o' trainin', Dad."

"An' now," sez I, "I want to see
This 'Campus' thing an hour or two";
(He looked surprised as he could be)
"Why, its the ground we're walking through."
I looked at him a moment hard—
W'y, all a Campus is, is yard.

That evenin' at the dinner table,
Some fellows mentioned "Almy Mater";
I spoke up soon as I was able,
For I most choked on my pertater.
Said I, "By Hen! do you know her?"
Said they, "It means our college, sir."

I turned an' looked at Ezry,
And then held out my hand to him;
Said I, My boy, the joke's on me,
You won't git me to kiek agin."
Upstairs he took in two more tricks,
Showed me his average, ninety-six.

I met a Mr. Lowenthal,
A coach onto the foot ball team;
He's sturdy limbed an' big an' tall,
With curly hair an' eyes 'at gleam,
But he don't do no work at all
'Cept learn them fellows to play ball.

Sez he, "You came down I suppose,
To see us clean up Old Purdue;
Well, you can go and bet your clothes,
That they have got it coming, too."
I said, "Dear Sir, I ain't insane
Enough to watch a foot ball game.

But, to the powers I had to yield
A feller has to be polite;
We went next day out to the field,
'Twas all marked up with bars o' white;
Sez I, "Dez, what's thim white marks fer?"
Sez he, "That is the gridiron, sir."

"Weary of myself, and sick of asking what I am and what I ought to be."—

CLAUDIA HALL.

The grand stand gay with banners bright,
An' laughin' pink cheeked girls an' boys,
Was jes' about the purtiest sight
I saw while down at Illinois.
The yells, the songs, the megaphones,
Stirred me into my very bones.

But soon the team came trottin' in,
All dressed in union suits o' brown,
An' went to kickin the pig skin,
An' through formations up an' down,
While everybody, fat and lean,
Jes' hollered this: "Rah! Rah! The team!"

A coin was tossed, the winner chose
The end the wind was blowin' from,
They all form up, a whistle blows,
An' Holy Crow! The game is on.
Was it exciting? Well I swear,
It beat a hoss race at a fair.

No words er pen o' mine can tell
That story as it should be told;
But one old fool began to yell
And beg o' that there line to hold;
An' afterwards they said, by gee!
That that old yellin' fool was me.

An' even yit, by fits an' spells,
I sit down on my old plow beam,
An' hear agin them songs an' yells
An' shade my eyes to see the schemes
O' color that I saw that day
An' wish;— No, I can't never play.

Jes' leave me there — a restin', chewin',
On jest a bit o' barley straw;
Hosses wonderin' what I'm doin'
Far away I hear the caw
Of an old crow up on a limb;
Memories too, are hauntin' him.

Well, "Dez" will be a Senior soon,
Thoughtful, learned, sedate, an' proud,
Freshmen (despised) will crave the boon
O' bowin', speakin not allowed;
While I—Who's voice is that I hear?
Blowed ef it ain't the 'Engineer'!"

"He giveth his beloved sleep."—PROF. TALBOT.

THE FIRST BOOK OF CHRONICLES

(With a Little Local Coloring)

1. And it came to pass in those days that Andrew, the High Priest, departed into a far country, he and his wife and his son and his daughter, his manservant and his horses, and all that was Andrew's and the School of the Prophets saw his face no more.

2. So the chief men looked around for some one to rule in his stead.

3. And behold, there dwelt in another country distant about a day's journey a godly man whose surname was James, and who was also a High Priest, and whose fame was in the mouths of all men.

4. So the chief men and rulers journeyed to his country to spy out the land, and to see if those things were true which had come to their ears.

5. And when they looked upon his face, and listened to his words of wisdom, they considered together whether they should entreat him to come and rule in Andrew's stead.

6. And behold, they were all of one mind, so when they returned again to their own city they wrote an epistle to James, saying : " The Rulers of the School of Prophets to James, Greeting :

7. " The noise of thy good deeds has gone out through the land and has come to us, and we have searched thee and found thee not to be wanting. Come and be our guide ; ours and our sons and our daughters that be in the School of the Prophets."

8. And James answered, " It is well." And after many days journeyed he and his wife and his son and his daughter to be in Andrew's place.

9. And all the young men and maidens that were in the school did rejoice, because his countenance was kindly and his words fair.

10. And he ruled with words of wisdom and not with a heavy rod.

11. But behold, in the first year of his sojourn in the land Stephen, a man of much wisdom and greatly beloved by all, who led the learned men in one part of the school, drew near to James and said :

12. "Let, I entreat thee, my mantle fall upon another.

13. For there is abroad in the land a grievous plague of insects which do devour the corn.

14. But God hath given me knowledge of the creeping things of the earth, to make them abate and do my will, so that there will be plenty of food for man and beast.

15. Yet now my burden is heavy directing the young men and maidens in their study and time is lacking."

16. And James answered, "It is well. Sorely art thou needed in the councils of the wise men, but far be it for me to be a stumbling block in thy path."

17. So Stephen's mantle fell upon another, who led the young men and maidens in his stead.

18. Then up arose Jonathan, and, standing before the High Priest, cried out:

19. "Behold, I have sat at thy right hand, and at the right hand of Andrew, and at the right hand of Selim, and of Thomas, who have gone before thee, lo, these many years, and wax old.

20. Spare me, I pray thee, the toil of leading the older men and maidens in their studies, for the burden is too heavy."

21. And James opened his mouth and said "So let it be." And he looked upon the wise men of the council, and he saw David, a little man, yet mighty in his wrath.

22. Now David marshalled the hosts of young men and maidens in another part of the school.

23. Yet he listened to James when he opened his mouth and said: "Wilt thou not lead the older men and maidens?"

24. And David considered many days. But when the feast of the mid-year was over, he replied: "Lo, I will take the mantle of Thomas, surnamed Jonathan," and it fell on his shoulders.

25. But meanwhile Nathan, a man grown old in years, and with a beard white like unto Aaron's, who for a generation had led the young men who were skilled in the building of temples, felt too that his burden was heavy. And he asked that he might lay it upon the shoulders of another.

26. So James (not the high priest, but another) received it.

27. Thus it was that Stephen and Nathan no longer sat with the High Priest in the councils of the wise men, though Thomas, surnamed Jonathan, and David and Thomas, surnamed Arkle, and others among the young men remained.

28. And it came to pass in the first year of James the High Priest, that a great feast was held, lasting many days.

29. And there were men come from all corners of the earth, from the East, and from the West, and from the North, and from the South to do him honor.

30. And they did confer with one another, and did prophecy.

31. Moreover the young men and maidens of the School of the Prophets did play a play, and did march up and down before them in strange raiment, and with the noise of timbrel and of drum.

32. And James spoke words of wisdom to the people assembled in the great court, so that they were well pleased, and said together with one accord "It is well".

33. And his deeds, first and last, behold, they shall be written in the Book of Chronicles in the years to come.

An Episode of the Military Department

(A Story With a Moral For the Colonel)

COLONEL FECHET was seated in his office looking over the Students' Directory when he found something that made his heart leap for joy.

"Ha! There's a man who is not drilling. That makes one more man for my regiment. I'll notify him at once and let him know that he can't sneak out of military duty even if he is a special student."

The next day the Colonel received a reply which made him bristle like a porcupine.

"Colonel Fechet: I never had any desire to drill and don't intend to do so."

Don't strain your imagination as to what happened next, for unless you were on the St. Louis trip it will be of no use. Scotty had an eye on the weather and made a hasty exit.

"I'll show the impudent scamp! How dare he send such a card to me! If ever he sets his foot on this campus (? — ? —)!"

The whole office becomes blue, and an odor of sulphur fills the air. With one dash he slams the telephone lever over, and with a voice that makes the windows rattle calls out:

"Is that you, Dean? I send by special messenger a card which I have just received from a man who is attending the University. Have the impudent fellow suspended at once," he roared with such force that the Dean turned pale.

The next day a tall, slender young lady called at the Dean's office.

"I received a notice to come to your office at once," she said, sweetly.

The Dean's face was a blank, but he managed to utter:

"Did you write this card?"

"Yes, sir," she replied, with a smile that told that she thought it was one on the Colonel or on the Dean.

From the side-splitting laugh of the Dean, it was evident that he thought it one on the Colonel.

Hidden Names

Some Rimes Composed While Sitting on the Senior Bench

This lassie's head is nobly stocked
With talents wide inside her;
But that is not the best, for she
Has a heart that's full an' wider.

—LUCILLA ?

This girl is surely never mad,
And never very smiley,
Never very, very bad,
But always a bit riley.

—ALICE ?

Mittwoch und Freitag sind schön,
Ganz schön auch ist Montag,
Ober kein Tag ist so schön
Wie der allerschönste Sonntag.

—ELSIE ROBERTA ?

We have wondered at many blendings
Of purples and greens and blues,
But we find the greatest charm in
The quiet, unchanging hues.

—LOUISE ?

Some like a larger robin
For a dainty pet,
But some, we fear, must own a fondness
For a little robinette.

—EVA ?

When he has gone to keep a store,
A stationery shop, it seems,
All people will go flocking there
To buy their stuff by reams.

—DUTCH ?

I have seen industrious ones,
Who never sought to shirk ;
But I never had my eyes filled so
As when I saw a Pi Phi work.

—RUTH ?

"The University genius syndicate."—GUY HUBBART.

Some teachers will get angry
When they have stood enough,
Which is because they are not all
Wholly good enough.

-- GEORGE ALFRED ?

These duties surely will be 'ard
On the brand-newhacting Dean,
But 'e's in shape to stand hit hall,
For you know 'e be green.

—EVARTS BOUTELLE ?

Of his work there's no complaint,
And never is he sickly,
He's generally independent, but—
He's just a little weakly.

—HOWARD G ?

Some men are made of wood,
And often brass makes a fool man—
It's mostly tin makes some look good,
But there's nothing like a woolman

—XENIA ?

A versatile comer
Sat in his room with a large Illinois pie before him ;
With a smile and a hum
He stuck in his thumb

And fished around till he found not only more than any of his predecessors had ever got before, but he also taxed the pie for allowing him to do it

Then he said, "What a plummer am I?"

C. P.?

"He'd rather on a gibbet dangle, than miss his dear delight to wrangle."—BUSH.

BALDWIN'S TOGGERY

Sacrifice Sale

The Soliloquy of the Bell in the Old Main Hall

(Dedicated to "Pete")

To ring or not to ring; that is the question
Whether 'tis nobler in me to suffer
The slights and insults of forgetful janitors,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles
And by breaking end them? To rust, to crack
No more; and by a crack to say I end
The ding dong and reverb'ratory shocks
That bells are heir to, 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To rust, to crack,
To crack, perchance to fall; aye, there's the rub;
For in that reign of silence what joys may come
When I have rid myself of ringing,
Must give me pause, there's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life;
For who would bear the winds and storms of time,
The jan'tor's wrong, the students' contumely,
The lack of well greased wheel, the rope's decay,
The insignificant office I hold now
That patient merit of the unworthy takes
When I myself might my quietus make
With bear cracking. Who would neglect, forbear
And hang in the old college tower
But for the hope of ringing sometime.
The undiscovered foundry from whose junk pile
No bell ever returns, puzzles my will
And makes me rather bear those ills I have Than fly to those that I know not of.

"His happy life is one perpetual grin."—HERB MEGRIN.

The Uni Primer

A is for Alice, who once said, "I ween,
Without my 'Mony' I wouldn't be seen."
Admirable Alice.

B stands for Boneyard, the freshman's delight,
A resort that is often frequented by night.
Bloody Boneyard.

C is for carnival, circus and candy—
Wasn't it all just perfectly dandy?
Carniverous carnival.

D is for Daniels, dainty and small,
Who has just as much dignity as though he were tall.
Dear Daniels.

E is for Edwards, exquisitely bred,
With his soft, white hands and curly swelled head.
Excellent Edwards.

F's is for Fechét, that colonel of ours,
Before whose wrath each freshman cowers.
Firy Fechét.

G is for girls, the best that there are,
Who come to our Uni from near and from far.
Great girls.

H is for Hie and Henry and for Hope and Herrick,
It's certain with Hope Hie'd like to elope.
Hopeful Hie Henry.

I is for idiots, try as you please,
You can't fail to see one, there're so many of these.
Innumerable idiots.

J stands for Jew, the "uncle," I mean,
Of the Alpha Tau boys, over on Green.
Three ball men.

K is for Kendall and also for Knorr,
Who are always together and take walks galore.
Kappa Katch.

L is for library, where till ten every night
The poor digs still worry after knowledge so tight.
Lingering learners.

M is for Maude, the carnival queen,
The most elusive beauty that ever was seen.
Mysterious Maude.

"Ought to be (w)rung."—S. A. E. BELL.

N is for Nelson, our Sigma Nu friend—
For a hot air jollier we him recommend.
Notorious Nelson.

O's for observatory, much sought in the spring,
Where Cupid lets fly many arrows that sting.
Oh ! observatory.

P is for Pearl, the Theata's best scout,
Who is such a peach for finding things out.
Prying Pearl.

Q is for Queen, one of Sigma Chi boys,
He never does make the least bit of noise.
Quiet Queen.

R is for rushing, the Phi Phi's great trick,
They grab a girl sudden and get a gold brick.
Rabid rushers.

S is for Simpson, who sits at her desk,
And calls people down until she's a pest.
Scolding Simpson.

T is for Tommy, whose surname is Clark,
He calls up the boys when out after dark.
Terrible Tommy.

U is for Uni, the pride of the west,
It ranks above all—by all deemed best.
Unequalled Uni.

V is for Varsity, oh, won't it be fine,
When it beats all the colleges in the big nine ?
Valent Varsity.

W is for William, Bill Cummins you know,
Who corners the tickets for our one good show.
Wily William.

X is for exs, which none of us like,
For when they are over back home we must pike.
Exasperating Ex's.

Y's for the youth who has won such fame
By leading the cheering at every game.
Yelling youth.

Z is for Zero, that Delta Tau man,
Who makes a pun whenever he can.
Zealous Zero.

A Plea in a Worthy Cause

Approach, fair Sprite of Glory from on high,
Where, in the deep cerulean of the sky,
A thousand angels bear aloft the flame,
And write in fiery words each gloried name.
With true attention thou hast watched the earth,

And caught each rising name of noble worth;
Still one remains on whom thy piercing gaze
May well be cast thro' all the cloudy haze;
Who rightly claims the tribute of thy note;
Who long has heard the praise of earthly throat;

Who modest stands, the unaffected cause,
While thundering laughter gives its due applause,

Whom approbation brings its rarest gem
And all the land finds no one to condemn.
O, Sprite, draw now thy splendid pencil forth,
Its tip a piney forest from the North;
Dip it into the awful central fire
Created source of every hot desire,

And high above the reach of envious Time
Beyond the stars, past Nature's very Prime Inscribe with more skill than man ever writ
"THE CHUCKLER"—then no further need of wit.

The Co-Op

A One Act Farce

SCENE I. TIME: 7.50 A. M.

(Crowds pushing and struggling to get in and to get out. Cries and curses are heard. Pandemonium reigns within.)

THE BOSS: Will about three of you people move to one side so I can get through?

FIRST CLERK: Just be patient everybody; we'll get around to you in a little bit. (To first buyer) Let's see, you want a bottle of drawing ink? We haven't any—can't you use "Carters"?

FIRST BUYER: I'll go over to Cunningham's.

FIRST CLERK: No, no—we would rather order it for you. It will be here in about two weeks. (Buyer curses under his breath and elbows his way toward the door.)

SECOND BUYER: Got any theme pads?

FIRST CLERK (to second clerk): Have we?

SECOND CLERK: No.

SECOND BUYER: You Haven't?

FIRST CLERK (to third buyer): No, we haven't any of Mr. Kok-i-noor's pencils. I tell you right now, that if you will try a Sterling pen you will never bother with a lead pencil again. Joint where you get no ink on your finger, and —

SECOND CLERK (to fourth buyer): Yes, we have drawing paper, but it is up stairs and I can't get through the crowd.

FOURTH BUYER: Let it go. Got "Labech et Delacours LaCagnotte"?)

SECOND CLERK: Got what? Write it down. (Buyer writes). Oh, no, it hasn't come yet.

SCENE II. TIME: 8.05 A. M.

FIRST CLERK (to second clerk): Gosh! but we did a big business this morning.

A Students' Store

is the store every student should patronize; not only because it's handy, but because its whole purpose is to serve your interests and those of your fellow students in the best possible manner. A real students' store, managed by students and faculty in the interests of the student body, must have as its object better service, the best qualities, fair prices, and a division of the profits among the students themselves. Such a store is

The Co-Op.

Already it has bettered the service; it has, in many cases, reduced prices, and its constant effort will always be to look out for your interests. We want your trade; we deserve it. We handle the kind of goods you constantly need and we hope to add new lines from time to time, as the demand may warrant. Get your friends to trade here, too.

ART PURVEYORS TO THE COLLEGE MAN

We, of the Class of '91, have devoted these 15 years of business life to making the best engravings in the commercial art trade. And always have we specialized on college work—keeping up with its growing demands, evolving ideas for its betterment, and every year turning out the Annuals that have made certain institutions famous. Never contract for the illustrating and printing of a college publication until you hear what Stafford has to say and to suggest. Start the book right and it will make a fat profit. Then said, "Why, you know dear (and here fell a tear)
We have to use this for Fred's eyes."

Attention

Know all Men by these Presents:—The Board of Directors and Stockholders of the Amalgamated Dephic Oracle Association, Limited, announces that a new Priestess has been obtained, who is able by means of powers hitherto unsurpassed to see all the past, all of the future, and the entire present. The services of one so gifted have been secured only after long and tedious negotiation, and involves an enormous pecuniary expense, but the officers of the company are so well assured of the absolute infallability of the Oracle, that they feel justified in announcing the rehabilitation of an ancient and long-neglected institution with much enthusiasm. Knowing as they do that the original location in Greece is not readily accessible to Americans, for whom the company wishes to do its chief service, the directors have removed the Priestess to Illinois, where under artificially simplified conditions she is able to be stimulated to utterances as certain as ever were those of the old days of Greece and Homer.

Because, however, the present generation, from a long dependence upon rational explanation, has become distrustful of such apparently supernatural intervention, a number of questions have been submitted to the oracle, and the answers are hereby reproduced with the kind permission of the original applicants. Some of the matters herein mentioned may seem to be rather personal, but all parties concerned are so interested in the results that they are willing to make slight sacrifices to secure to the incredulous world, the enormous blessing of this great, and it must become greater, institution.

It is necessary for lack of space to omit the questions, but in all cases they may be understood from the nature of the answers.

Beta Theta Pi.—Beware the snares of girls, and take in no more men like Plummer.

“Doc” Green.—Fear not, brave youth. You will yet have some sort of a team to manage next fall, but it may a domesticated one.

Player's Club.—No more parrot, please.

Fraternities.—Bull dogs are not popular at Illinois.

Professor Moss.—No, Thomas W. Lawson will not engage you as his advertising manager. After seeing you work for the Choral Society Concert, he has decided that your methods are too sensational.

Ina Lapham.—Yes, the world knows that you are in it.

"Spike" Hunt.—There is no certain cure for insanity.

Dr. Davis.—You can't help being fond of girls.

Illinois Club.—You will never be able to elect a president of the University.

Elsie Bean.—The only way to get rid of that tired feeling is to grow out of it.

Alice Riley.—Yes, you have pretty teeth.

Jessie Mann.—You should not play Hunky-dory.

Dr. Neville.—You are easily the gayest man in the faculty (except Dr. Davis).

Gordley.—You will always be that way.

"Red" Matthews.—We know only one position you could fill if you should lose your present one. You might be the whistle on a freight engine.

It will be seen from these few examples how very useful the oracle can be when her services are needed. Attention is called to the plainness which characterizes her answers, in contradistinction to the annoying and often misleading ambiguity of former days. Extracts From College Diaries

November 1905.

What a day today has been. I certainly made a stir in University circles this afternoon. Of course it is the day of the great Illinois-Michigan game. But did anyone ever see an Illinois man such a credit to his college as I was today? I surely made a stir with that silk hat of mine. How people did stare at me. But pshaw!! I'm getting used to that. It's almost a bore to be good looking - anyhow it makes a hit with the girls.

SIGMA NU CHERRY.

December 16 1905.

"Goodness, I can't sleep tonight. I'm so excited I just must write in my diary. I am just beginning to realize, to appreciate what it must be and how it must feel to be the first lady in the land. Of course I have always known how popular I am but to be voted, to be acknowledged the most popular girl in college! Oh dear! I could just hug those boys who held off the time until I got ahead. I think I'll do it too. Every girl in college is furiously jealous—who would blame them? But I must go to sleep. Here it is four o'clock. But I'm so happy."

NELLE MILLER.

*"There was a young man up at college,
Who said he went there to get knowledge,
When commencement time came, 'twas not knowledge
That kept him at college."—JIM WARNER.*

As to the college my way I trace
There greets me daily a maiden's face,
From beneath a crown of golden hair
There sparkle her eyes, a laughing pair,—

Yet to meet the maid I cannot hope,
For she's only an "Ad" for somebody's soap.

"Babblings of an Expired Politician"

A new volume by C. P. PLUMMER, author of the "Students' Directory", and many other notable works, with an introductory article by "Prep" Little entitled "A Five Years Fight for Phi Kappa Sig."

The above is a new book from the fluent pen of C. Preston Plummer, BΘΠ. Critics who have read the advance sheets, state that this is the best product of the gifted young author, and is said to excell the famous "Students' Directory" the appearance of which, it will be remembered, took the public by storm and provoked such widespread discussion and newspaper comment. The present book deals with the author's three years' experience with college politics. It treats with Machiavellian insight of the influence and powers which govern affairs at a modern University. Startling revelations of gratt and corruption are made with a frankness which is astonishing to the ingenue. All through the volume the author's intimate personal acquaintance with college graft is evident. Some of the most interesting subjects are treated under the following headings:

A freshman's bid for popularity;
A reubens metamorphosis into a mixer and a good fellow;
How to acquire a stand-in with the profs;
Working one's way through college as a political factor with the common people;
The comparative advantages of the frat man and the barb in politics;
How I made the Betas;
Factors in making Phi Delta Phi;
Some considerations in offering excuses for cutting classes;
A safe method of cutting Moot Court cases.

A rumor is afloat that Miss Juliet Swayne is hard at work on her new romance "The difficulty in stringing two fellows at the same time; or where you land when you divide your affections."

Miss Swayne has written several plays based on actual experience. It is not known whether this is fiction or a sort of autobiography.

"The Charm of Reticence," is the title of a new book by KATE MANN. This book is in a serious vein and deals with the habits and conduct of the modern society girl. Miss Mann criticises quite severely the behavior of the American girl. Some rules of conduct are suggested, which it would be well for every young girl to study.

Lewis heard he was not going to be roasted in the Illio this year, and came to the Editor one day in great agitation and purchased this space at regular advertising rates. He later handed in a number of roasts on himself, but we regret that we cannot publish them as the copy was accidentally lost.

Some Letters From Our Patrons

My Dear Obliging Mr. Editor:

May I convey my sincere appreciation of your successful roasts on me in last year's Illio? I think that publication is a beneficial one. It gets people's names in print when otherwise they would never be thought of. The name Cherry, for instance, unheard of a year ago is talked of as much now as the Warner shoe. I am a good deal like an actress, Mr. Editor, not in shape understand--but in disposition. If I can't do something meritorious to gain admission into the columns of notoriety I uniformly do something sensationally silly,--&, as a matter of confidence, Mr. Editor, do you know the latter comes easier than the former? Someone has told me that the 07 Illio will probably fail because of financial difficulties. I repeat sir, again, that I think that popular publication should not perish & it shall not, for I give you my word of honor as a gentleman that I will pledge my $60 frat pin, my high-heeled shoes & my silk hat to keep its head above water (to use Aurora gossip). Please let every one know that I don't object to having my name used frequently in the Illio. Last year I was told by Mr. Hartease Kreibaum, who, having a daughter in school here, was very much interested in University affairs, that my name was used more than anyone's. It has always seemed strange to me that after he read these jokes he intimated that the boys in Champaign wanted me.

Don't understand me as asking you to put my name in print again. Far be it from my intentions. I do want you to understand that I don't object, though. If I thought I would be treated as royally as I was last year, I would send about twenty of your Illios away to friends. You might make it twenty-four & enclosed you will find check for same.

Thanking you heartily for past favors & trusting that our future connections will be satisfactory as our past ones, I am only,

CHERRY

EDITOR ILLIO:

You old hateful thing:

I take this means of informing you that I have instigated a libel suit for your uncourteous & unfitting takeoffs on my good name in your last issue of the Illio

My lawyer, Mr. Beach, who has never yet lost a suit, has assured me that it will be an easy matter to obtain pecuniary compensation for marring a once matchless reputation.

Mr. Editor, I can hardly contain myself, to think that you would allow matter to be published which you know and I know was manifestly false. I don't mind a person saying his opinion of another so long as he does it in a forward "Goat" Reynolds manner, but I do object to a person's diplomatic efforts to conceal his identity. I wouldn't do such a thing for anything, not even the good-will of all the fraternities which I prize so highly.

I can point with pride to my past record & challenge any of my jealous contemporaries to equal it. Often have I heard my pupils say "The fair Florence," "the demure Miss Pitts," etc., showing in what deep regard they hold their teacher & you old spiteful thing, I think I deserve it & I don't see why you didn't allow something like that to be printed about me. There is one thing I cannot understand--why couldn't you have let one good thing be said about me? There must have been numerous such epistles.

I give you fair warning, though, old Editor. I'll wait until the next issue is out and if something good isn't said to retrieve my past dove-like reputation, the damages demanded will be doubled. If you decide to print something nice about me, be sure and call and let me see the proof. I might add something which you cannot understand now. Simply

FLORENCE PITTS.

The Faculty at Play

One summer day when the Moss was Green,
The faculty at play was seen.

The Carpenter with his brand new tool,
Was making for them a swimming Pohl.

The Gardiner to improve its looks,
Changed the course of both the Brooks.

The Herron and the Crane did fly,
Behind them came the Fox close by.

The Baker taking up the Chase,
Spilled Pillsbury's best in his Post-haste.

And Tommy in his efforts to Dodge,
Climbing a fence, on a Pickett did lodge.

Frisky David from his Davenport,
Shouted the cry, "Oh! Tom's no sport."

When a Sharp nail hit, Tom groaned "Great Scott!"
So Rietz dashed up to this tragic spot.

As James Drew him off, the crowd grew paler
And putting him down, said "You'll need a Taylor."

The dew came down, the Moss looked Grey,
The faculty came in from play.

Across the Lake, the Nightingales soar,
And of this tale, you'll hear no Moore.

From the Other Side of the River

This is the cry of the bull-dogs from the blissful fields Elysian,
Whither they were wafted by the great bull-dog physician.

“How are the mighty fallen,
Old greatness, how cast down.
Now the stout retainers of Otto
Are gone from the old twin town.
Oh, Otto, our good prince Otto!
How we revelled 'neath your direction
How we nibbled the tail of the flying cat
At a time to escape detection;
When the moon was as high
As the library steeple,
We howled, and laughed
At the silly people
Who opened windows
And saluted us
In their hurried provocation
With Bible words
That rooted us
To the spot in admiration.

Here we can drink from the nectar trough
And eat or sleep the livelong day,
Or fight each other (so much the side)
In very much the same old way;
But the life's too smooth
We long for excitement
To frighten a girl or such delightment,
To tree the boy who delivers fruit
Or dodge the bullets that rude men shoot.

O, for a chew of the postman's leg,
Or a bit of a cyclist's shoe,
A good old fight in the corridor
With our masters wondering what to do.

But our days are fallen in ways of grief
Our time is the sear and yellow leaf.”

This is the song of the bull-dogs from the blissful fields Elysian,
Whither they were wafted by the great bull-dog physician.

A Fable

It was a beautiful night and every one was happy. But why shouldn't they be—it was the night of the Alpha Chi reception and every fellow knew he would get to go—in time. At eight o'clock the reception rooms were filled with the learned Seniors of each Frat but they were all nervous and anxious to be away. Not long after, the Juniors came stringing in but like the seniors they hurried off and soon the Sophomores began to arrive with wrinkled trousers and soiled collars. The attraction of the frappe bowl was too great for them though and they lingered so long that it was after ten before they could get home and let the Freshmen have the dress suit which had been "handed down" so many times that evening.

Moral: If all classes are to be represented at the same time at a function don't have it formal.

Some Aledo Gossip

Fred D. Danford of Joy holds a prominent position at the University. He plays in the military band and also sings in the Y. M. C. A. quartette.

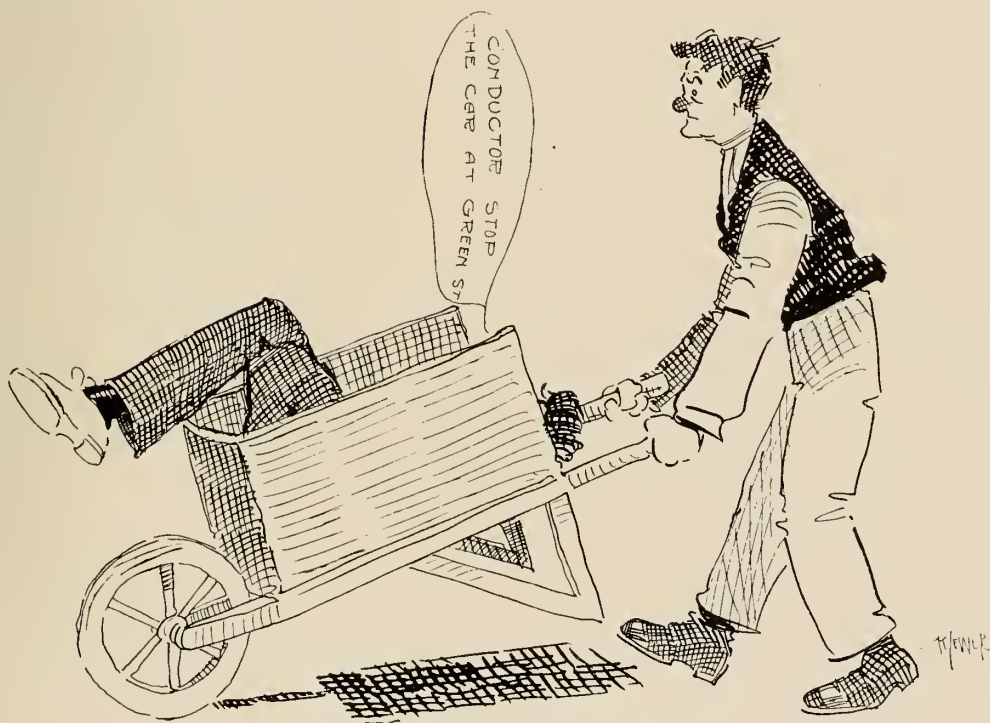

It is rumored that Harry C. Gardner of Viola and George A. Williams, formerly of Aledo, now of Galva, have been spending at least two nights of the week in the neighborhood of the sorority houses.—Aledo Times-Record, Nov. 16, 1905.

RALPH A CLEVER BOY

His Diplomacy Is Too Much for Our Dean of Undergraduates.

Mr. Ralph Pillinger, who is a sophomore at the University of Illinois, narrowly escaped being expelled recently from that institution as a result of hazing his underclass men. His cleverness, however, in destroying any evidence against him and his calmness of mind when called before the authorities saved him this inconvenience. This insures him success in architectural engineering, his chosen profession. As Pillinger has shown marked ability in athletics, his friends and associates are much pleased with the outcome of this affair. — Austin Indicator, Feb. 17, 1906.

A Promising Journalist

Homer Cooper, who is spending the holiday recess with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Piercy Cooper, in this city, is a member of the Illini reportorial staff, "doing" athletics. Homer turns easily to newspaper work, and is meeting with the success that the Union could have predicted for him. He more than once turned his pen to account in connection with this paper, before he went to Champaign. In fact, he wrote his first "copy" for the Union. The Illini is the U. of I. students' paper. It has attained considerable dignity even outside of student ranks, since Homer has been working on it.—Shelbyville Daily Union.

MISS PARKER WILL GO TO PHILADELPHIA.

She Is Given the Honor of Representing Her Class at a Meeting There.

Miss Minnie Parker daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Parker, of this city, has had an honor bestowed upon her by being elected the representative of her society at the Champaign University to the convention at Philadelphia.

Miss Parker is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta organization, a part of the university, and the class at a recent meeting unanimously elected her to represent them at the national meeting of their society which meets in Philadelphia at the same time the National Teachers' Association meets. Last March Dean Davenport, while playing marbles, caught the whooping cough.

Professor Dodge, while trying for a position on the faculty basket ball team, caught the Danish measles.

Mr. Crane, not to be outdone, captured the mumps.

Brownson, who had just heard a new conundrum, proceeded to spring it on a friend, with the following result :

Brownson:—"What goes round a button (buttin)?"

A Friend :—"You do."

Prof. G. L. Clark, to his class in trusts :—"I would rather plow corn for two weeks than teach one hour."

Student in the rear end of the class-room, with a sigh on his face :—"What a shame it isn't corn-plowing time."

As Others See Us

A group of Inauguration visitors were discussing some of the features of the University. Most of those in the group were foreigners.

"Vot you tink off dis school? It iss a pig place, not?" said the envoy from Heidelberg. "But ach, de peer, id iss not! Naw und der vas no wiennewurtz un pretzels. Dey iss not no duels. Efferpody vas so pusy dot dey is fery pusy. De stoodents poof de smoke in leedle shord poofs. Vell, afther I klimet me all dese stairs I iss fery exhausted. Oudside de buildings iss fery pooty. Dey is fery subshtantial mit dere great dignitude, put dey is not as goot py haf as olt Heidelberg."

"Ah, missieu," broke in the representative from Paris, "zese buildings zey are gra-aã-nd mysterieuse, soo-bleim. Zere est s'omesing woon-der-ful about de par-åde laz nigh' zit was un superb de-mon- sträs-sion. Boot ze dogs zey sont g'eer. Zey all bool-dogs and non poodle. Zere collar are oof leether. Poodles sont be-anti-fool. Je vis dat de bool-dog are ferocieuse. Ah, had viola-zere un coomes." The next few seconds were improved by the Frenchman in getting on the opposite side of the group from the bull-dog as it came down the walk.

"Och!" said the Dublin professor, "don't be wastin' yer time gittin' away from a bull-dog. Better be seein' the sights while ye are in Ameriky. Good luck to the day I iver left the ould counthry. I never see the bate o' these American stoodents. I says to mesilf yisterday 'Professor ye are a granchorn besides these folks. Yisterday when I saw the University head crowned King James I, I felt loike throwin' me hat in the air an' yelling 'Long live th' King.' I stood there without breathin' a breath and smilin' loike a rale haythen Chineser that had just come off a taybox. I wished I could jine the sport me self. If Nora, me wife, coold have seen it! The school is foine—but ould Dublin for me."

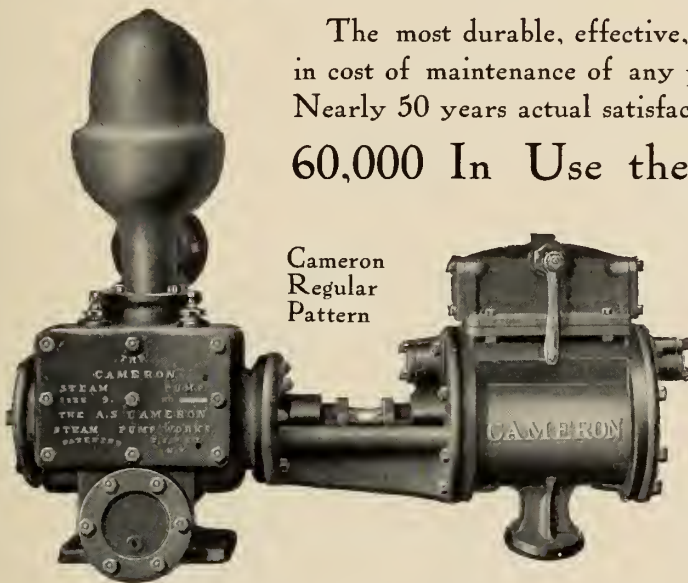

"Well, zese people hev, a moar loafly campus zan ze Universitie oaf Naples," said a southern European. "But it not so poatic as Naples. Ze life ez not so poatic ze sky ez not so blue. I loaf ze Italians best. Zese people moove so fas'. Zey neffer go slow effen eef zey haf nothin' to do. Zey are all fery no-bil, howefer'."

"Ah coom now" said the Scotchman, "checks of o' each one o' us shoold brent red wi' shame. These air lichtsom days. We weel may spind our time in bein bairns. Gie oursilves tae foon an' our host their praise."

Pattern

All Cameron Pumps are compact and strongly built with few working parts and no outside valve gear.

THE CAMERON STEAM END:

Note the very simple inside valve gear, free from delicate parts and absolutely reliable. The steam mechanism consists of four stout pieces only.

Explanation—A is the steam cylinder; C, the piston; L, the steam chest; F, the chest plunger, the right-hand end of which is shown in section; G, the slide valve; H, a lever, by means of which the steam-chest plunger F may be reversed by hand when expedient; I are reversing valves; KK are the reversing valve chamber bonnets, and EE are exhaust ports leading from the ends of steam chest direct to the main exhaust and closed by the reversing valves I.

The Cameron Catalog (Illustrated) is attractive, interesting and helpful, containing full descriptions with illustrations of other patterns and will be sent to any who will mention this book when writing.

One More Lie Nailed

The popularity of the Pi Phi House hung trembling in the balance for twenty-four hours recently. Some insidious blackmailer started a rumor through the Uni. on Monday morning that there had been but fifteen callers at the Pi Phi House the night before. Ever jealous of the fame of our co-eds, ye scribe immediately ran down the rumor, and learned that the treacherous blackmailer had suppressed the facts. It happened that there were only fifteen girls home on the aforesaid night, the rest having not yet returned from the holiday vacation. We are glad to be able to nail this lie, for such by implication it was, and to defeat the despicable purposes of this arrant blackmailer.

We are glad to note that Miss Dillon remains loyal to the native environment. The cow-boy outfit is now nearly as familiar a landmark of the campus as Prof. Pickett's red vest. "Stay with it, Jessie."

Where is it to be?

Great interest has been aroused through out the Uni. by the announcement that the Dekes are to have a new chapter-home. Speculation as to its location runs rife. The first news was followed by a rumor that the University had decided to sell its Library Building for the purpose. It is said, however, that President James has denied this report. Many now believe that the entire new addition south of Fairland has been secured, and that the individual bidders were engaged by the chapter in order to conceal its designs. Prof. Pickett declines to be interviewed in regard to the location but assured ye scribe that "the boys" would erect a house which would back the other "frats" into the Bone-yard. Meanwhile we must wait, and patiently endeavor to suppress our natural impatience.

Leo G. a Benedict.

The recent marriage of our good friend, Leo G. Hana to one of the belles of Champaign County affords us much pleasure. We desire to take this opportunity to publicly extend to Mr. Hana the heartfelt sympathies of the entire community. Leo is one of the most promising young men in all the faculty as well as being exceedingly popular among the large number of students in his classes. He has had a very prosperous career here, and we have no doubt that his venture into the dangerous field of matrimony, will be attended by his usual success.

It is to be sincerely hoped that the example set by Mr. Hana will be followed by other young men of the faculty, who have been leading the lonesome life. There is Eddie Milne, for example. Eddie is a quiet, home-loving youth, of good habits, and would make an exemplary husband for some of our numerous college widows. Then there is Doc Reitz. He, we suspect, would be quite an acceptable proposition. It is rumored that the Doc has been maneuvering for an advantageous position in certain quarters and we are anxiously awaiting developments. Go ahead, Doc, "faint heart never won fair lady," you know.

"Red" Matthews is another one of the boys who ought to be looking about. But "Red" has been around some, he says, and can't be easily trapped by the girls.

Then there are also Johnnie Wilson, Charlie Malcolm, Jack Harman, and several others, who, we trust will note this advice, and perchance, begin to think.

Prof. Frederick Changes Ties.

Traditions of the University have been overturned. Prof. Frederick appeared upon the campus last Thursday morning wearing a light green tie instead of his usual red one. He informed ye scribe, however, that the green one was a present from his wife, so he had to wear it. "How" he asked, "can a mere woman be expected to be up on the subject of aesthetic ties?" Ye scribe gave it up!
